FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

HEAVY DECLINE IN STOCKS.

GOLD UP TO 114.

GOVERNMENT BONDS ADVANCED.

EASY MONEY MARKET.

WALL STREET, MONDAY, May 6—6 P. M.

The rise in flour and grain which occurred the first part of last week in the West has finally reached this market, and prices for flour are five to ten cents better, and wheat has advanced about two cents per bushel. Cotton remains inactive, former prices being with difficulty sustained.

GOLD—HIGHEST 114, LOWEST 113⅝.

The gold market was strong to-day, owing to the unsettled condition of the Alabama claims question. There was no excitement, however, and no extraordinary movement took place. The premium opened at 113⅝ and touched 114 at various times during the day, but could not be made to hold at that figure.

MONEY MARKET.

The market was easy and borrowers could get all the accommodations they required at six and seven per cent, and many availed themselves of the generosity of lenders in order to carry over stocks which were heavily down.

THE STOCK LIST.

Stocks have not experienced such a decided depression in many days. All the active shares sympathized with the bear feeling from the start; and their downward course, although gradual, was steady from the opening to the close. New York Central and Hudson River commenced at 98⅛ and declined to 96½; Erie opened at 67 and fell to 65¼; Pacific Mail started at 75 and went down to 72¾; Western Union was bid off at 76⅞ in the morning and sold down as low as 74⅛, and so on through the entire list, as will be seen more in detail in the table of the opening and closing prices, which we give below:—

UNITED STATES BONDS.

The highest quotations for government coupon bonds to-day compare with the prices of last Monday as follows:—

	Monday, April 8.	Monday, April 29.
United States sixes, 1881	118⅝	118⅞
United States fives, 1881	111⅝	112⅞
United States five-twenties, 1862	113⅜	115
United States five-twenties, 1864	113	116
United States five-twenties, 1865	115⅞	116⅛
United States five-twenties, 1867	116	115⅞
United States five-twenties, 1868	116⅛	115⅞
United States ten-forties	111	110⅞
United States currency sixes	116⅝	116⅞

The upward tendency of the gold premium caused governments to strike a fraction in advance of Saturday's quotations. The fives of 1881 and the five-twenties of 1862 and 1864, in the first column of the above table, are quoted ex coupon.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE.

There is no change in foreign exchange, sixty-day prime sterling bills being sold at 109⅝, and short sights at 110⅛.

THE CALLED IN BONDS.

A correspondent furnishes the following information in relation to the government bonds which have been called in by the Secretary of the Treasury:—

Permit me through the columns of your valuable journal to impart some information to the public, which I think in many cases will be of material benefit, in reference to the five-twenty bonds now being redeemed by the government. I find from experience that many holders are laboring under the impression as to the registered bonds that they date from the time issued by the Register of the Treasury or transferred by him (which are of various dates), whereas it is from the act—viz., February 25, 1862. The coupon bonds of this loan are of four series—first, second, third, fourth—of which are redeemable at present certain denominations and numbers of first and second series, and of registered (which have no series) certain denominations. Many still hold these bonds and are and have been losing interest since December and March last, erring in the impression as to date and act, as above stated.

STATE BONDS.

Southern State securities continue dull, and the quotations of Saturday last are unaltered.

RAILROAD EARNINGS.

The Marietta and Cincinnati Railroad earned last month $145,858, against $118,173 for the same time last April. In the course of a year or two this road will be deprived of considerable of its traffic. A new and more direct road is to be constructed from the Parkersburg (West Virginia) bridge down along the Ohio to Belpre, and thence across to Athens, which will save some fourteen miles of travel.

FREIGHTS.—The inquiry for berth room to-day has been very light, still there was no change noticeable in rates. The chartering business was less active, especially for the petroleum trade, for the advance demanded for that article was generally above the views of exporters. The engagements reported were as follows:—To Liverpool, by sail, 22,500 bushels grain at 4½d., vessel haul from store; small lots of provisions, by steam, at former rates. To London, by steam, 67,500 bushels grain at 5½d. To Antwerp, 250 boxes bacon, 25s. The charters comprise:—An Italian bark, hence to Gibraltar for orders, 2,600 bbls. refined petroleum at 4s. 6d. to the Mediterranean, 5s. 6d. Adriatic, and 6s. if to Constantinople, Odessa, or Beyrout; a Norwegian bark hence to Cork for orders to the United Kingdom, 2,400 quarters grain at 5s. 3d. flat, with the usual Continental clause; a Norwegian bark hence to a Continental port, 3,200 bbls. refined petroleum on private terms; a German bark to Bremen, 5,000 bbls. refined petroleum on private terms; a German brig hence to a Baltic port, 1,700 bbls. refined petroleum reported at 4s. 6d.; a British brig from Philadelphia to Havre, 2,000 bbls. crude petroleum at 6s.; an American bark, 470 tons, to Havana, general cargo, $2,300, gold.

PETROLEUM.—On 'Change to-day the market showed a fair degree of animation; but the offerings were light and business somewhat restricted by the firmness of holders, who demanded still higher prices. For the month refined was held at 23⅝c. a 23¾c., and very little was offered at these prices. We hear of sales of 5,000 bbls. for June at 23⅝c. Crude in bulk was also sparingly offered and very firm, quoted at 13⅝c. a 13⅞c. Case oil, in sympathy with the general upward turn, was also firmer, but nominal, quoted at 28⅝c. a 29½c. Naptha remained scarce and firm, quoted at 7½c. in bulk, and 12c. a 12½c. in shipping order. At the creek the market was by no means active, but was decidedly higher, quoted at $4 a $4 05 on both upper and lower roads. OUR FOREIGN INDEBTEDNESS.

[From the Mercantile Agency Annual.]

The question as to the amount of our foreign indebtedness and the annual burden of the interest charge is one which often excites attention, and is made the basis of many arguments in regard to our fiscal policy. In the last report of D. A. Wells, Special Commissioner of the Revenue (1869), our foreign debt was thus estimated:—

National securities	$1,000,000,000
State, railway, municipal and other securities	465,500,000
Total	$1,465,500,000

The opinions, however, held on this subject by those who have given it examination greatly vary.

The estimates of the best informed bankers, whose business makes it necessary for them to follow the state of the foreign exchanges as closely as possible, vary from $560,000,000 (say $560,000,000 of United States bonds and $300,000,000 of State, municipal, railroad and other securities) to $1,200,000,000; the several estimates of State, municipal and railroad bonds being substantially the same, and the variation being on the amount of United States bonds.

The elements of this question are somewhat difficult to specify with certainty. In the first place it is necessary to estimate the adverse balance of trade upon the actual exports and imports of merchandise, including specie. The declared values of the imports and exports for the last eight years, as made up by the Bureau of Statistics, are used in the following statement:—

Imports of merchandise during the eight fiscal years 1864 to 1871, inclusive		$3,103,777,394
Add five per cent for smuggling and undervaluation		155,188,870
Of specie and bullion		137,381,718
Total		$3,396,347,982
Exports (gold values)—
Domestic produce	$2,234,206,864
Foreign merchandise	122,951,795
Specie and bullion	628,171,120
		2,985,229,779
Adverse balance		$410,103,152

From this statement it would appear that we have bought $410,000,000 worth of goods more than we have sold, but it will not do to accept even this estimate without some allowances.

We have added five per cent to the sum of the imports for undervaluation and smuggling. It is not believed by experts in the Treasury Department, however, that over three per cent should be allowed for this item. On the other hand, some addition ought to be made for the profit upon exports, and also for such exports as are not reported, it being much more difficult for Custom House officials to obtain accurate statements of the values of exports than of imports. And even up to a recent period it is well known that considerable quantities of domestic produce shipped from New York in foreign steamships have not been entered on the outward manifests.

The fact that domestic products of very considerable value are annually exported from this country which do not appear in the published statistics of commerce is evident from the following official statement of the value of imports into Great Britain from the United States as compared with a similar statement of our exports to that country:—

Calendar Year.	Imports into Great Britain from the United States. (£ sterling computed at $4.85.)	Fiscal Year.	Exports from the United States to Great Britain. (£ sterling computed at $4.85.)
1866	$322,712,957	1866	$205,596,779
1867	199,653,725	1867	161,144,273
1868	209,523,151	1868	136,912,009
1869	205,975,905	1869	158,745,533
1870	262,051,498	1870	202,146,723
		July 1 to Dec. 31	103,292,738
Total in 5 y'rs.	$1,169,436,269	Total in 5½ y'rs.	$951,155,600
Aver'ge per ann.	$277,087,274	Aver'ge per ann.	$172,937,393

If the value of products imported into Great Britain from the United States be computed at rates similar to those used in our export valuation it follows that merchandise to the value of $44,149,881 is exported to that country annually, of which we have no official cognizance. And even if in the British mode of estimating the value, the cost of freight be included, there still remains during the last five years an annual excess of thirty millions. If, therefore, as some suppose, a larger allowance than five per cent should be made for smuggling and undervaluation, the under estimate of our exports, as above shown, will fully offset an additional allowance of five per cent.

It is often claimed that a large sum should be added to the adverse balance of trade, as exhibited upon the merchandise statement, for the freight paid to foreign shipowners, who now do most of the ocean transportation.

In the absence of correct data in regard to the total value of freight on imports, the Chief of the Bureau of Statistics has estimated the amount to be eight per cent on the declared value of the merchandise; and, as about sixty-eight per cent of the whole was carried in foreign ships, this item amounts to $169,000,000.

Another item often added to our supposed foreign debt is the annual expenditure of Americans residing or travelling abroad, estimated by Mr. Wells at twenty millions per annum. But this is now partially counterbalanced by the expenditures of foreigners travelling for business or pleasure in the United States, the number of whom, both from Europe and Asia, is already very considerable, and is every year increasing. There is, however, another source from which we receive a much larger accession of wealth than from foreign travel, viz.—immigration. The lowest estimate of the amount of money brought into the country by immigrants is $68 per capita, at which rate a sum of nearly $22,000,000 must have been added to our national wealth by the 321,350 immigrants who arrived on our shores during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1871, an amount which would far outweigh the loss sustained through the somewhat lavish expenditures of wealthy Americans travelling in foreign lands.

The last item to be added to our estimate is the interest which has become due upon the debt while it has been accruing, and, upon the supposition that the whole amount of our foreign debt does not now exceed $900,000,000, this item would comprise about $240,000,000 of it—say eight years' interest at an average of $30,000,000 per annum. (We did not begin to borrow upon federal securities until the year 1864.) As about one-half of the amount received as interest on American securities has been reinvested this item will amount to $120,000,000.

We have now the following items:—

Adverse balance of trade for eight years	$410,000,000
Freight to foreign shipowners	169,000,000
One-half interest accrued	120,000,000
Contingencies	3,000,000
Aggregate	$702,000,000

From the above statement it appears that the debt we owe to Europe, incurred during the past eight years, should aggregate about 702,000,000. But owing to the fact that our credit abroad during a part of that period was not assured, our securities sold considerably below par. A careful estimate made by the Chief of the Bureau of Statistics establishes the fact that the average discount during the period named was not in excess of twenty-two per cent. In computing the aggregate of this debt, the par value of these securities must be ascertained; and as they sold at an average rate of seventy-eight cents on the dollar, it follows that our debt to foreign nations amounts to $900,000,000, and our annual interest charge to 54,000,000.

It is proper to add here that several leading bankers, as well as some of the ablest financial editors, are firm in the belief that the value of federal securities alone, held in Europe, exceeds $900,000,000, and that the total amount is about twelve hundred millions. A part or the whole of the discrepancy may be accounted for by the fact that the computation of $900,000,000 as the value of all United States securities, includes only those which are owned in Europe, and not those which are held as collaterals. It is well known that the low rates of interest, about one-half those of New York, have attracted from this country borrowers for large amounts on the security of United States bonds.

The most important question is, What have we received for this indebtedness? The reply is, foreign merchandise, chiefly European products, ranging from one-sixth to one-fourth of the value of our total importations.

Upon the common assumption that our imports consist mostly of luxuries, this would not be a pleasant exhibit, but such is far from being the fact. We have borrowed a large part of the total import, and in order to tell of what it consists, it is necessary to consider a rule which has been proved by experience—viz., that the most constant element in our importation, that which varies least per capita, consists of articles of luxury or comfort—wines, silks, tobacco, tea and coffee, fancy goods and the like; it therefore follows that the excess of imports which we have borrowed consists of articles of necessity, such as metals, lumber, leather, hides, wool, dyestuffs, and other articles which enter into the processes of domestic industry, and most of which are reproductive in their nature.

And this is doubtless the fact—the war diverted men from the accumulation to the destruction of capital, and what we have borrowed is, in some respects, simply a replacement of the capital destroyed. It has therefore been a force without which we should have been hampered and crippled. Had we not thus been able to borrow these articles of prime necessity, our railroads, mills and works of every kind, and the opening of new lands, would have been far less. In one sense it may be said that, by thus borrowing a portion of our tools of production and distribution abroad, we have placed ourselves in a position which will make it easier for us to pay our debt owed both at home and abroad. We have borrowed productive power; and the possession of this power, by enabling us to employ labor on a large scale, has attracted to us productive power of another kind—that of human intelligence and muscle, as represented in the scores of thousands of able-bodied immigrants who flock annually to our shores. This influx constitutes a permanent addition to our wealth-producing forces, as well as to our national strength.

As to this debt being due on demand, and the alleged danger of fiscal trouble from the sudden return of bonds, little need be said; the fact that they have been taken when our credit was doubtful makes it certain that they will be held, now that our credit is assured. It is believed that our danger is greater from too great facility in borrowing yet more than from any sudden collapse of credit and an imperative demand for payment of what we now owe. The export of United States bonds has partly ceased, but we are now borrowing railroads by exporting their bonds; it behooves us to see that we do not borrow railroads faster than we can profitably use them.

REAL ESTATE MATTERS.

The week opens favorably in suburban property, and a number of large and very attractive sales are advertised to come off during the month. To-day a very valuable piece of property on the Hudson River, between 135th and 137th streets, comprising about eighty city lots and a mansion and outbuildings, will be offered at the Exchange by Messrs. A. J. Bleecker, Son & Co. For magnificence of prospect and in all its surroundings this portion of the island, adjoining Washington Heights, is not surpassed, if equalled, in this country. The grounds of this special piece of property are laid out with taste and have an extensive frontage on the Hudson. The activity in lots here has been going on for some time, and quite a number of capitalists have been making extensive investments, with the intention of making improvements, and during the season a number of lots will be offered for sale. The transactions at the Exchange to-day were unimportant. Messrs. A. J. Bleecker, Son & Co. withdrew a brick house and lot on Elizabeth street, by order of the referee, William C. Barrett, who settled the matter by an amicable arrangement. Mr. Joseph McGuire, under order of J. J. Lyon, referee, sold a house and lot, 17.6x49, on the south side of Thirty-second street, sixty-five feet west of First avenue, to B. Hengstenberger, for $6,050. Mr. James M. Miller, under direction of Charles Price, referee, sold a lot on south side of Twenty-sixth street, 420 feet west of Sixth avenue, for $10,000.

Margaret Armstrong, a young lady twenty years of age, residing in Houston street, near Greenwich, appeared before Justice Cox, at the Jefferson Market Police Court, yesterday afternoon, and charged that on Sunday night Wilson Register, a boarder at the Continental Hotel, induced her to accompany him to Taylor's Hotel, in Jersey City, and under promise of marriage and by violence caused her ruin, and has subsequently failed to make his promise good. Register denied the charge and gave bail in the sum of $1,000 to appear and answer.

Bonds will be required in the amount of the bid for the faithful performance of the contract, with two or more sureties, whose sufficiency must be certified to by a United States Judge or District Attorney.

CLEANSE THE STREETS—THE SUMMER COMING.—Dirty, dusty, bad smelling streets still continue to annoy and irritate the citizens. A dozen or so of scavengers and a few watering carts make a show of doing something to get rid of the accumulated filth on our thoroughfares and byways; but beyond this nothing is being done. The streets of the city are as dirty to-day as they were a month ago, and the prospects are that a month hence they will be just as bad as they are to-day. The hot days of summer, too, are approaching, so that, taking all things into consideration, there is really cause for all the complaints and all the outcries which have been raised, calling for a sweeping reform so far as the cleanliness of the city is concerned.

THE CARLIST INSURRECTIONARY MOVEMENT IN SPAIN.—News telegrams from Madrid, Paris and London, dated during yesterday to midnight, confirm the report of the defeat of Don Carlos by Amadeus' army. The insurgents sustained heavy losses in killed, wounded and prisoners. The province of Navarre remained deeply agitated. The sympathizers with the insurrection are endeavoring to escape the penalty of their treason by flight and exile to France. The whereabouts of Don Carlos and his commander Rada, is uncertain. It is alleged that the Prince-General had been captured by the royalists, and, again, we are left to infer that he has made his way safely across the border to France and that his present danger is to be found in the vigorous reclamation which will be made by the Spanish Crown on the government of the republic for his surrender. His present movement for the attainment of throne power in Madrid appears to be at an end, however, and its termination may be regarded as disastrous to his cause and that of his family in the same direction.

The Alabama Claims Muddle—Floundering on Both Sides.

The difficulties surrounding the disputed point in the Alabama claims of submitting the claim for consequential damages to the Geneva Board of Arbitration seem to thicken every day. Both the British government and our own are floundering in the entanglement in which a tortuous and overreaching diplomacy has involved them. The governing powers of both countries are so bound by political considerations or necessity that there appears to be little hope of unravelling this entanglement. Our special despatches from Washington show that the government there is in a quandary and that the different members and branches of it are not in accord upon the disputed question or the policy to pursue with regard to it. It is evident, too, from our London news, both by telegraph and letters, that the British government is in a similar embarrassed situation. Both General Grant's administration and the Gladstone Cabinet desire to find a solution of the muddle and to carry out the Treaty of Washington for the sake of establishing the best relations between the two countries and for the éclat which that would bring to them. But the matter has been so mismanaged that the precious fruit of promise which they eagerly grasped has turned to ashes in their mouths. Judging from our latest intelligence the deadlock has become more difficult of removal than ever.

As is generally known, the question at issue is simply whether the United States will withdraw the claim for consequential damages embodied in the case submitted to the Geneva Board of Arbitration or not. No other difficulty has arisen, nor is likely to arise, apparently, in carrying out the Treaty of Washington. Great Britain stands firmly on the ground she took that the claim for consequential damages must not be considered or acted upon by the Geneva Board of Arbitration; that it was never intended in making the treaty that this claim should be submitted, and that she cannot go before the Board for arbitration with the Alabama claims unless the United States withdraws the claim for consequential or indirect damages. Though she has given in her case and counter case, or reply to the American case to fulfil the conditions of the treaty that far, she persistently asserts that she will not consent to arbitration if the American claim for consequential damages be not withdrawn. In this, too, the government appears to be sustained by the people and the press. Even the opposition in Parliament, while denouncing the Gladstone Ministry for mismanaging the matter and bringing trouble upon the country, holds the same view with regard to the inadmissibility of arbitration if the American claim for consequential damages be not withdrawn.

Our government maintains the right to submit the claim, and urges that the intention was all along to submit it. Our government asserts further that there is not only nothing in the treaty prohibiting that, but that the British government must have known, from the discussions and the protocol when the treaty was under consideration of the Joint High Commissioners, that the United States reserved the right of presenting a claim for consequential damages. Certainly the absence of any prohibitory clause in the Washington Treaty and the presentation of this claim in the protocol of the American Commissioners show that the British treaty makers were either very stupid—which will hardly be admitted—or that they indirectly consented, at least, to leave the question open. Under these circumstances it is reasonable to conclude that the decided hostility of the British government to having the American claim for indirect damages submitted for arbitration sprung from an after thought. The English people, more sensitive than any other on questions touching the pocket, were led to suppose, through the press and politicians, that consequential damages might involve them in the payment of a thousand millions of dollars or more. It was the money point of view, and not the principle involved, that aroused popular feeling in England. We do not suppose that Mr. Gladstone or any other English statesman imagined an overwhelming award, if any award, would be made for consequential damages; but the agitation of the question, which appealed to the pocket of Englishmen more than to their patriotism, answered the purpose. It was a political trick, and might almost be designated contemptible, in view of the great interests at stake.

On the American side the conduct of the government has been little less reprehensible. There is no doubt that in justice this country had a right to claim consequential damages. The wrong doing of England as a friendly neutral Power in hastily recognizing the rebels and in aiding them through the Alabama and the other corsairs, which the British government has virtually acknowledged in the Washington Treaty, resulted in a large and serious damage beyond the destruction of the vessels for which it admits the liability to pay. It was only just to put in a claim for full damages, direct or indirect, and to leave the decision of award to the arbitrators. But this ought to have been more clearly expressed in the treaty, leaving nothing to doubt or controversy afterwards. The administration, as well as the British government, was so anxious to make a treaty and to gain popularity by doing so that it seemed to be afraid of being explicit. There was something of mental reservation and diplomatic chicanery on both sides, unworthy of two great nations. Hence has arisen all the trouble. The American people did not expect to gain any great award for damages, nor much any way by the treaty, but they gladly accepted it as a promise of peace and better relations with a great cognate nation. Now the public mind has become well nigh disgusted with the muddle into which the two governments and politicians have brought this matter and cares little whether the treaty be carried out or not.

In this dilemma the administration is floundering in a pitiable manner. It fears the consequences of a failure in that which it has made so much noise about and from which it expected to win popularity. The Secretary of State in particular is desirous of saving his amour propre and himself from odium, and, therefore, appears ready to sacrifice the national honor. He has proposed, it is said, to withdraw the claim for consequential damages, provided the British government will consent to accept the non-liability of neutrals for such damages as a rule of international law hereafter. It appears that Mr. Schenck, our Minister at London, has actually approached the British government with a view to such a settlement. He may have exceeded his instructions and have gone too far. That remains to be seen. But we are inclined to think the proposition emanated from the Secretary of State. Of course England has seized with avidity an overture that would give her an opportunity of escaping from an embarrassing dilemma without sacrificing her pride. She does not care about the liability of neutrals in the future, for she has the facility of making rules to suit her own interests on all occasions, provided she can get comfortably out of the present trouble. The gentle intimation of Mr. Fish or Mr. Schenck, consequently, that a compromise of this character is possible, has struck with force the English government.

But at this stage of the business the President becomes alarmed and assumes a firm attitude. He had made in the strongest terms the submission of the American case for consequential damages a sine qua non, and cannot endure the idea of backing down. That is characteristic of General Grant. Then he cannot afford, after the Cincinnati Convention and with the political prospect before him, to take any step that looks like yielding to England. He is afraid to wound the national pride by abandoning the ground the government and nation had taken. Little as he pretends to comprehend the intricacies of diplomacy, he understands the danger of wounding national pride. In his anxiety, consequently, he ignores Mr. Fish, and calls upon his friends of the Foreign Relations committees of Congress for support. Instinctively his common sense tells him he ought to maintain the ground he had taken. He resolved, it is said, to withdraw the instructions to Mr. Schenck or to repudiate them, withdrawing the claim for consequential damages. Surely, he can see now that Mr. Fish has been mainly instrumental in leading him into this humiliating position. Will he request that respectable old fogy to retire and appoint some vigorous, high-toned American in his place? We regret the President did not forego party considerations in a matter of so much national importance when he invited certain members of the Foreign Relations committees of Congress to consult with him. He should not have ignored the democrats at such a time. His own friends, however, did not appear to give him much consolation. Members of Congress as well as the people have become disgusted with the miserable mismanagement of this Alabama claims difficulty. The best course for the President now is to take the responsibility, hold to the position assumed at first, and leave our case to the Geneva arbitrators. If England should refuse to go to a decision or to abide by it and the Washington Treaty falls, this country will only stand where it did before. War need not follow. It is not a question of war. Indeed, we were on better terms with England before the treaty was made than just now. The time will come when a settlement can be made, and a peaceable one, we hope, without making the sacrifices we have made in this treaty, and without binding ourselves to an alliance and neutral obligations that may prove inconvenient in the future. We have a peculiar destiny and life of our own, and should be careful not to make entangling alliances or obligations. At least let us have an end of this war of words and diplomatic chicanery. Let our case stand as it is and abide the result. The responsibility rests with England and not with the United States.

The Approaching Military Trials in France—Their Probable Effect Upon the Bonapartes.

A few days ago we learned that Marshal Bazaine, who had been censured by the Committee on Capitulations for his conduct at Metz, had written to President Thiers demanding a trial by court martial. General Wimpffen, who was left in charge at Sedan when MacMahon was wounded, made a similar request. Now it appears that Bazaine and Wimpffen and Uhrich, who so long and so heroically defended Strasbourg, are each to be tried by court martial. It is stated that the court martial in the case of Bazaine will consist of Marshal Vaillant, Admirals Trehouart, Rigauld de Genouilly, and Generals Chanzy and d'Aurelle de Paladines. It will be held in the riding school at Versailles, and will last, it is expected, over one hundred days. Twelve hundred witnesses will be examined before the court. In these trials, in themselves considered, we have but little interest. But in so far as they are likely to exercise an influence in determining the future government of France they deserve and they will command attention. It is a general conviction that these trials will have a bad effect on the prospects of the Bonaparte dynasty. The examination of witnesses will no doubt be of the most searching kind; and it is certain that the revelations will be of such a kind as that the public will see how hollow and rotten was the empire in spite of all its external glitter and show. The trials will have another effect. The French mind needs constant occupation. The public mind will be sufficiently occupied by the trials; and time will be gained for the strengthening and consolidation of the republic. As time rolls on the chances seem to multiply in favor of the continuance of the republic. The star of Austerlitz is for the present shrouded in gloom.

The Summer Season of Amusements.

Now that the cold blasts of winter have finished their final symphony and rude Boreas blows a less chilling tune from his breezy trumpet, the preparations for the amusement and recreation of the denizens of Manhattan during the dog days are in active progress. First comes the welcome announcement of the concerts in the Central Park, which will be conducted this summer under the auspices of Dodworth's Band. The Saturday afternoon concerts in the garden of the metropolis have always been a source of pleasure and healthful recreation to the citizens of the great city, and have secured at all times thousands of gratified and attentive listeners. A rumor is afloat that the music in the other city parks will be discontinued this season. It would be a matter of regret to all if this proves to be the case. The expense of giving concerts in the other parks is but small in comparison to the beneficial influence exercised by them. To cite two instances, Tompkins Square and the Battery, there are hundreds of families living in the vicinity of these places who would be completely deprived of the only pleasure they derive from the city during the summer. A poor laborer with a large family cannot afford to take them all up to Central Park on a Saturday afternoon, while they can enjoy as much pleasure and benefit from the music brought to their own doors. These concerts are designed for the people, and not for any particular class, and by confining them to the Central Park alone the object for which they are given would be frustrated. Therefore we trust that the Park Commissioners will follow the good example shown in this regard last summer and will do their share toward lightening the burdens of care and labor of the poorer classes in the city. Next we have the cheering news of the opening of Central Park Garden next week by Theodore Thomas' unrivalled orchestra, and a renewal of those delightful soirées, without which there would be a blank in the summer season. In a month or so Mr. Neuendorff commences a series of concerts at Terrace Garden, and smaller summer resorts will also be in full operation. The managers of the theatres are preparing most attractive bills of a light and sparkling order, to suit the demands of the season. Those who prefer the comforts of home to the discomforts of country hotels during the heated term, will find enough to amuse them in their leisure hours this year.

The Mexican Pons Asinorum—How It Should be Solved.

The intelligence which from day to day reaches us from the ill-fated land of the Montezumas, in its contradictions, vagueness and uncertainty, tells the whole story of Mexican chaos in a peculiarly left-handed way. Cities besieged by contemptible forces, sieges raised by scarcely more contemptible bodies of troops, immense provinces in revolt, detached leaders "pronouncing" and plundering to-day and joining the loyalists to-morrow, treasons, treacheries and unreliable adherences everywhere, form the staple of news from over the Rio Grande. Into our own borders, too, the cow-thieving Mexicans carry their freebooting system, murdering the inhabitants and keeping up a reign of terror along the Texan side of the river, which, it seems, from our latest advices, reaches to controlling the law courts and intimidating United States juries.

From all that can be learned of the forces of the revolutionists they are not such as any stable government would permit to exist for a week; but the power of the Juarez government seems barely able to maintain head against them. The Executive is said to be out of funds and heavily in debt to its own employés. This being the case, and there being no prospect of improvement, it seems scant mercy to humanity that induces the United States to permit this chronic insecurity and consequent irresponsibility to continue. When outrages are committed on our citizens and their property the Mexican government, on being appealed to, declares its inability to curb its unruly citizens, who thereupon proceed with the work of murder and pillage at their own sweet will. We have posted a small and insufficient body of troops along the border, who are a farce in the way of protection, since the Mexican raiders, having "lifted" all the cattle they desire, cross over the narrow river and our soldiers are not permitted to pursue them. The project of an international railway is talked of; but where, in face of present and prospective insecurity, will capital be found insane enough to invest therein? With provincial governors ever ready to "pronounce," and a large proportion of the population always on the lookout for profitable robbery, the profession of stopping stage coaches and murdering the passengers or holding them at high ransom would soon be applied on a large scale to mail, passenger and freight trains. Yet it is preposterous to suppose that this race of moss troopers will be allowed to stand as a stumbling block in the way of civilization for all time to come. The rich and beautiful country which they curse with their presence must be opened up to progress, the iron rails must be laid across it and all its resources developed. To do this stability must be gained, and if the Mexicans are unable or unwilling we must do it for them. We respect the republican form of government which obtains there; but a republic should be a guarantee of order, and not, as it stands now, the pretence under which blighting anarchy reigns. The duty of the United States in the premises clearly is to extend a protectorate over this fair and disordered land, to develop its latent industrial forces, pour in a life-blood of energy and lift up the country to the level of its destiny. We should gain in every way from this, commercially and nationally. The question of annexation could be left to decide itself later. The throwing of a sufficient force into Mexico to insure order there and prevent the disturbances in Texas might seem a costly experiment at first, but it would repay both countries in a period astonishingly short. Will President Grant set about solving this question in the only way possible to arrive at its solution?

Our Public Statues.

The movement to erect in the halls of the Capitol at Washington memorial statues to the great men whose lives were passed in the service of the people deserves the approval of the community. It is a matter in which every citizen of the republic is deeply interested. We desire that not only shall our great men be honored, but that they shall be worthily honored. The best talent of the country should be called upon to commemorate the memory of the men whose genius and virtues shed glory on the nation. To mark our appreciation of whatever is good and exalted in our own times or in the immediate past is a duty that we owe not less to ourselves than to posterity. It is a duty so sacred that no mean or selfish feelings ought to be allowed to influence our action or to sway our judgment in the selection of the work which is to be the index to posterity of the degree of estimation in which we hold the memory that we seek to perpetuate through art.

These we hold are the considerations that ought to sway those charged with the responsibility of erecting public statues. Unless men or events be worthy of being commemorated by the highest efforts of art they ought not to be honored by public statues at all. On the other hand, a people who are content to show their respect for the great benefactors of their country in indifferent memorial works must be wanting in real appreciation of worth or in the power to recognize what is noble and good in art. We can imagine the wonder which our public statues would excite in the mind of an ancient Athenian could he revisit the earth and wander through our public places. His first impression would, no doubt, be that our monuments were those of great malefactors, put up as a warning to posterity. But, as soon as he should discover his error, his indignation would know no bounds, and he would pray to return among the classic shades, no longer desiring the companionship of so degenerate a race of men. And yet there is no lack of artistic talent capable of producing at least respectable work, but the corrupt system of cliques which controls the distribution of patronage makes it more important to have friends than to possess genius. Corruption and ignorance are the two powers that exercise such baneful influence over the art memorials of the country. The manner in which public committees are organized, made up for the most part of well-intentioned, fussy people, who know absolutely nothing about art, gives great advantage to clever intriguers, who nearly always succeed in out-manœuvring the unsophisticated artist who has spent his time in his studio among his models and knows little of the ways of the lobbyist. But though ignorant of the way of the politicians, this is just the man who is most likely to be able to produce a good statue, if only he could secure the patronage which is carried off by the incompetent artist who happens to be a clever man of the world. At present there is an opportunity for the representatives of the people both in Washington and Albany to introduce a much-needed reform in this matter. We have already called upon the Congress at Washington to throw open to public competition under clearly laid down regulations the Farragut memorial statue, and in the case of the statues to be presented by the State of New York for the hall of the Capitol we urge that the same course be pursued. We want to see some respectable public statues erected for sake of novelty, and we are strongly of opinion that the best way to arrive at this consummation is to throw the work open to competition. It will be necessary to appoint a competent committee in whose honor and judgment the artists will have confidence. An invitation to compete, accompanied with information as to the amount of money to be paid for the statues, the size of the required models, &c., would not fail to bring out the best talent of the country. A little intelligence, combined with some honesty, would then enable the committee to select such a work as we might not be ashamed to point out to foreign visitors as the tribute of the American people to her departed great men.

The Burning of Niblo's Theatre.

The destruction of Niblo's Theatre yesterday morning by fire will certainly be regarded as a misfortune by that large class of theatre goers who love spectacular entertainments. Year by year the number of those who simply go to a play to be amused by the grotesque antics of a clown or dazzled by the glories of the lime light have rapidly increased, owing principally to the influence exerted by the "Black Crook" and kindred spectacles. In the corruption of the popular dramatic taste Niblo's has been the principal sinner, and the baneful and demoralizing influence it exerted was felt from one end of the Union to the other. Many were willing to condone the injury inflicted on the legitimate drama in consideration of the sparkle and brilliancy that marked representations which had no other claim to popular favor. Those who had seen "Cinderella" in the Châtelet were pleased to find the gorgeous splendor of the Parisian theatre rivalled in an American theatre, and the unthinking were delighted to be amused by something which demanded no strain on their mental faculties. A less respectable class found a source of enjoyment in an exhibition of leg development that shocked the severer and more respectable portion of the community. Nor was the change inaugurated by the presentation of "Black Friday" likely to reconcile people of taste to the course of the management. It is only a few weeks since a bitter war of words was waged by the dramatic critics of the entire metropolitan press against the production of this piece, which was universally regarded as a flagrant offence against good taste. There will not be wanting moralists who will see in the conflagration something like an interposition of Providence. But the mass of the public will certainly learn of the accident with feelings of regret.

The loss, we understand, will fall with about equal severity on the incoming and outgoing management. Last night was to have been the first presentation of the famous "Lalla Rookh" at this house; but the fates decreed otherwise. All the properties belonging to that gorgeous spectacle were destroyed. Up to the present the cause of the fire has not been clearly ascertained. There are rumors afloat that the fire was due to the act of an incendiary in revenge for the presentation of "Black Friday." We hope that the rumor will prove to be groundless, but think that the authorities should take immediate steps to investigate the circumstances connected with the fire. If any confirmation of the story be received the authorities ought not to rest until the culprit be brought to justice. The rapid destruction of the theatre and the great danger to which the Metropolitan Hotel was for some hours exposed, ought to act as a warning against building places of amusement in enclosed spaces, which necessarily increased the difficulty of combating the flames and exposed the lives of the audience to unnecessary danger.

SALT LAKE CITY, May 6, 1872.

A convention of spirit mediums meets in this city to-morrow, for the purpose, as stated, of adopting measures to benefit society and develop more perfectly the science of inspiration.

The Herald (Mormon) says Greeley and Brown are a strong ticket, and if the democrats endorse it "Horace" will be next President.

The Tribune (liberal) says there will be a complete resuscitation of the democratic power in the event of the success of Greeley, for a fusion once made the democrats alone will decide all questions.

The Mormon Conference of the South commenced yesterday at St. George.

Nearly two hundred thousand dollars, silver bullion, was received last week and shipped East.

A week ago it was freezing; to-day the thermometer always eighty-two degrees in the shade.

Truman G. Younglove, of Crescent, ex-Speaker of the Assembly, is at the Fifth Avenue Hotel.

Dr. L. J. Jordan, of San Francisco, is at the Grand Central Hotel.

A. J. Drexel, the banker, of Philadelphia, and George W. Childs, of the Philadelphia Ledger, are at the Fifth Avenue Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. William J. Florence are to sail for Europe to-morrow. Their latest performances were given in Boston, and were received with great favor. Last Thursday evening Mr. Florence was entertained at a dinner by a number of his friends in that city. It is the intention of Mrs. Florence to remain in Milan, Italy, for twelve months, pursuing a course of study in music. Mr. Florence, however, will return about the close of August, when the object of his journey—to procure novelties for one of the theatres of this city, and performers for the Sunday evening concerts at the Grand Opera House—shall be reached.

That brave and dashing officer, General Edward Jardine, who, in addition to a heroic record in the early part of the war, won additional laurels while aiding to quell the riots of July, 1863, has just been made the recipient of a magnificent present. It will be remembered that he was nearly shot to pieces and lay for about a year a helpless and almost hopeless cripple at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. The State, as a grateful memento of his services, gave him $10,000. The present just given him, and intended as a further tribute to his undaunted bravery in helping to rescue the city from the anarchy of mob violence, is a badge of unique and appropriate design. The top is a cross bar with star in the centre, emblematic of a brigadier general's rank—the star being a solitaire of great beauty and brilliancy. Pendent from this is a heavy gold Maltese cross, of most neat and exquisite workmanship, the insignia of the Ninth Army corps, in which the General served, being on one arm, various Masonic emblems on another, and the respective badges of the Grand Army of the Potomac and Grand Army of the Republic on the others, while in the centre is the coat of arms of the State. The presentation took place at the National Hotel, Mr. James W. Bell making the presentation in a neat and appropriate speech, and the General most feelingly, but felicitously, responding. Among those present and participating in the pleasing exercises, including a splendid collation, were A. R. Pyrfe, A. P. Holladay, General Richard M. Tweed, Jr., Ira Jeance, Edward Cline, Charles Dennison, Colonel Augustus L. Thomas and S. B. Mills.

THE FIRE IN THE FISHKILL MOUNTAINS.

NEWBURG, N. Y., May 6, 1872.

The forests on the top of the Fishkill Mountains, on the opposite side of the river from Newburg, are on fire. Last night the line of fire was about one mile in length and rapidly spreading. Newburg Bay was brilliantly illuminated by the glow of acres of burning timber. The destruction of cord wood and standing timber will be immense. The scene from this city last night was magnificent.

SUICIDE OF A DENTIST.

Failure in Business the Cause.

Yesterday morning Coroner Herman received information that Mr. William B. Franklin, a dentist, living at 345 Sixth avenue, and doing business at 421 Sixth avenue, had committed suicide by hanging himself in an attic room of his residence. Mr. Franklin had been quite despondent of late, in consequence of failure in business, and saw nothing but pecuniary distress for himself and family in the future. This drove him to desperation, and, preferring not to live under such circumstances, he resolved to terminate his miserable existence. Accordingly Mr. Franklin made a rope of tape strings, and, securing one end about his neck, fastened the other to the bed post. Then, kneeling down, the noose around his neck was tightened, thus producing strangulation and death. This was on Sunday night, and at a quarter past eight o'clock yesterday morning he was found dead by his wife. Deceased was thirty-five years of age. He was a member of the Seventh regiment.

SUICIDE BY TAKING POISON.

Coroner Schirmer yesterday held an inquest at No. 52 Suffolk street on the body of Mr. Ludwig Ewald, a German, sixty-five years of age, who committed suicide by taking poison. Deceased, a carpenter by trade, was out of employment, and of late had exhibited symptoms of mental derangement. On one or two occasions Mr. Ewald expressed a desire to die, and on Saturday, while alone in his room, swallowed a dose of narcotic poison and was subsequently found sick. On being questioned by Apolonia Werner, living in the same house, Mr. Ewald said he had swallowed poison and wished to die. Medical aid was of no avail, as death ensued at a later hour. In making a post-mortem examination on the body Deputy Coroner Cushman found the stomach intensely congested and the pupils contracted. In the doctor's opinion death resulted from narcotic poison, probably some preparation of morphine, and such was the verdict of the jury. Mr. Ewald was a very respectable man, and had grown up sons, who are doing a good business.

AN OFFICER BADLY BEATEN.

On Sunday evening, while Officer Tom Levins, of the Nineteenth precinct, was on duty in East Fifty-fourth street, he had some hard words with Jacob Lambrecht, a brother of the late detective of the ward. Levins is quite a small man compared to Lambrecht, and, of course, in a tussle with him the officer would have but little chance of arresting him ordinarily, but when without his club, of which he had been deprived by Lambrecht, who struck him with something on the hand compelling him to drop it, he was, of course, more especially at his mercy, and Lambrecht pummelled him without stint, for Levins appeared yesterday at the Yorkville Police Court with his upper lip split in two and his left eye swollen and very black, besides other marks of violence on the head, face and arms. Lambrecht was not arrested until yesterday morning, when he was taken to Court and held in the sum of $500 bail for examination.

THE HALLORAN SHOOTING AFFRAY.

John Halloran, late of 30 Bowery, who was shot in the left breast by a pistol in the hands of James Burns, a city marshal, at the Gotham drinking and gambling saloon, 298 Bowery, early on Sunday morning, the 28th ult., as previously reported in the HERALD, died on Sunday night in Bellevue Hospital from the effects of the wound. Burns, who had been drinking to great excess, accosted Halloran, who was sitting quietly in the barroom, and requesting him to stand up, deliberately shot him as he raised from his chair. There had been some ill feeling between the parties, but just previous to the shooting Halloran had not said a word to Burns nor given him any provocation whatever. Deputy Coroner Marsh will make a post-mortem examination on the body, and on Wednesday an inquest will be held in the case by Coroner Young. In the meantime Burns remains in the Tombs awaiting the result.

It is thought the motion of Lord Russell for a humble address to Her Majesty's government praying that the British arbitrator at Geneva be instructed to withdraw from the Tribunal of Arbitration until the claims of the United States for consequential damages are withdrawn, which was to have been made at the session of Parliament to-night, will be again postponed.

GREELEY IN ENGLAND.

Comments of the London Press on Mr. Greeley's Nomination.

TELEGRAM TO THE NEW YORK HERALD.

LONDON, May 6, 1872.

The London papers this morning comment upon the nomination of Horace Greeley for President of the United States by the Liberal Republican Convention at Cincinnati.

The Times says the nomination of Mr. Greeley is farcical, and his election is hopeless. It, however, kills President Grant's chance for re-election, and makes certain the nomination of a candidate by the democrats.

The Post argues that Mr. Greeley will be successful if his nomination is endorsed by either of the other conventions yet to be held; but such action, the Post thinks, is impossible.

The Telegraph says the nomination of Mr. Greeley directly concerns England, because he is hostile to the Treaty of Washington and is a bigoted protectionist.

The News praises Mr. Greeley, but doubts his fitness for the position of Chief Magistrate of a great nation.

A CASE OF INFANTICIDE.

The Mother a Prisoner in Bellevue Hospital.

Yesterday morning Coroner Schirmer took some testimony in the case of Mrs. Cornelia Terry, the widow woman arrested on Saturday last by Detective Bennett, of the Eleventh precinct, charged with throwing her infant child into the vault of premises No. 316 Rivington street. In a conversation with Officer Bennett Cornelia denied being the mother of a babe, but subsequently confessed that she had thrown a stillborn child into the sink, not knowing what else to do with the body, as she was desirous of concealing her shame from her relatives and friends. During the interview Cornelia also stated that the father of the child was Charles Simmons, a married man, employed in the Continental Bank Note Company, where she had also been engaged.

Deputy Coroner Cushman made a post-mortem examination on the body of the child and found that it had been born alive. Death had resulted from asphyxia, but the doctor could not say that it had been done intentionally. The woman is a prisoner in Bellevue Hospital.

OUTRAGEOUS ASSAULT BY TWO RUFFIANS ON A WOMAN.

At eight o'clock last night, as Mrs. Ida Elliot, of No. 29 East Twenty-ninth street, was passing the corner of Broome and Tompkins street, she was assaulted, knocked down and violently kicked by two well-known roughs, named Edward Smith and John Conklin. They were arrested by Officers Coleman and Haas, of the Thirteenth precinct. While on the way to the station house Conklin assaulted Haas, but with the assistance of Officer Coleman he was safely landed in the station house. Smith made his escape, but was subsequently recaptured by Captain McDonnell. The woman, upon being confronted before the prisoners, recognized them as her assailants. She was attended by Police Surgeon Waterman and sent home.

POLITICAL.

Manifesto of the Liberal Republicans of Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, May 6, 1872.

The liberal republicans of this State, through their chairman, have issued the following manifesto:—

TO THE PEOPLE OF PENNSYLVANIA:—

The National Convention of the liberal republicans, composed of delegates from every State in the Union, has presented a national ticket and a declaration of principles to the country, and now appeals to the enlightened patriotism of the whole people to give success to the great political movement so auspiciously inaugurated at Cincinnati. Prompt and thorough State, county and district organization is the first necessity of liberal republicanism. The Pennsylvania delegation to Cincinnati directed the delegates from each Senatorial district in the State to select a member of the State Central Committee, and forwarded the name of the chairman. It is important that the names be returned without delay, as a meeting of the committee will be necessary at an early period. It is earnestly urged upon the friends of liberal republicanism to organize an executive committee in every county as speedily as possible, and report the names of the chairman and secretary to the State Committee.

The principles declared by the Cincinnati Convention are free from all ambiguity or dissembling. That they are in full accord with the settled conviction of an overwhelming majority of the American people cannot be doubted by any intelligent observer of the expressions of popular opinion, and it will not be denied that Horace Greeley and B. Gratz Brown most fitly represent the political faith so manfully and unanimously avowed. A few men of the past, and more who profit by the present, will confront the national departure to fraternity and peace and the supremacy of the civil laws in all the integral parts of our free government. They will resist the effort to unite all patriotic citizens in one grand struggle to restore the Union to an honest and economical administration, to lessen the burdens on our industry and energy and to enforce the great demands of liberty and law; but they cannot prevail. With the prejudices of political organization we have nothing to do. Compelled to a severance from a party of whose better record the liberal republicans are justly proud, we advance to meet the supreme necessities of the nation, and invite the earnest co-operation of all, without sundering party affinities, who sincerely desire the regeneration of our national, State and municipal governments.

Revolutions take no steps backward. Organization, immediate and systematic, is our present and pressing duty. The struggle with arrogant and well-armed power will be desperate for a time, but the issue cannot be doubted. In this political demoralization of peace, as in the terrible trials of war, it will be solemnly decided that a government of the people, by the people and for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

A. K. McCLURE,
Chairman Liberal Republican State Committee.
PHILADELPHIA, May 6, 1872.

Mississippi Opinions of the Cincinnati Nominations.

JACKSON, Miss., May 6, 1872.

The Cincinnati nominations and platform are well received. The Mississippi democratic press are outspoken for co-operation with the liberal republicans. The Vicksburg Herald and Meridian Gazette, both leading democratic papers, say it is a good ticket. The Meridian Mercury supports the ticket unqualifiedly, saying it goes for Greeley and will not wait the action of the main clique or party. The Clarion, the State organ of the democratic party for years, says the platform and nominations pave the way for the union of all good men for the restoration of peace and prosperity throughout the South and the country at large. The colored vote is predicted for Greeley.

Pennsylvania Labor Reform Convention.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., May 6, 1872.

Delegates to the Labor Reform Convention are arriving in limited numbers. Appearances this morning were decidedly in favor of nominating candidates which the democracy at Reading would endorse without hesitancy. McClelland, McCalmont and Wright were prominent for the Governorship. A strong tide has, however, set in this evening in favor of the nomination of a gentleman holding no allegiance to either of the old parties, and the project may be carried. Richard Trevellick, J. S. Sylvis, Hinchliffe, Cameron and others are looked for this evening as visitors, and their counsels are expected to give strength to this movement. Strong protective resolutions will be offered and a fight made for their adoption, especially by the western counties.

The Florida Gubernatorial Contest.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 6, 1872.

The appointment of J. R. Emmons, counsel for Governor Reed in the late gubernatorial contest, as Attorney General for the State of Florida, has been confirmed by the Senate.

In the Assembly this morning Mr. Cessna moved that the impeachment charges against Governor Reed be reconsidered, which was defeated.

The Legislature adjourned sine die at twelve o'clock, noon, to-day.

There was great rejoicing at St. Augustine, and thirty-nine guns were fired in honor of Governor Reed's acquittal.

Endorsing the Liberal Republican Convention in Tennessee.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 6, 1872.

The Liberal Republican Executive Committee will issue an address to-morrow to the people of Tennessee calling for a ratification mass meeting on the 20th inst. to put forth an electoral ticket in favor of Greeley and Brown. A local ratification meeting has been called for next Wednesday night.

THE MOTION AND SPEECH which defeated the efforts in the Cincinnati Convention to make nominations before laying the platform were incorrectly attributed in the report of the proceedings to Colonel McClure, of Pennsylvania. They were made by General John Cochrane, of New York.

EAST SIDE ROWDYISM.

Assaulting an Officer in the Discharge of His Duty.

Patrick Harrigan, John Downey, Hugh Gray, James Kelly and a woman named Rose Kelly, it is alleged, were drunk and disorderly, on avenue D, on Sunday night, and made night hideous with their noisy cries and demonstrations. Officer Francis Sicoot, of the Eleventh precinct, attempted to disperse them, when he was attacked by a man called Jack Lone. The officer resisted with his club, but was stabbed twice in the face with a pocket knife. Officer Geary coming to his assistance, the two succeeded in capturing the entire party. Justice Scott disposed of the gang by awarding them a six months' sojourn on the Island. Lone was held in default of $500 bail to answer for his assault on the officer.

WASHINGTON.

The Alabama Claims Muddle Brought Before the House.

Opinion Respecting the Extraordinary Conference at the State Department.

A GRAVE MISTAKE COMMITTED.

The President's Final Determination to Stand by our Case.

The Anti-Grant Feeling Spreading Among Republicans.

BLAINE OR BOUTWELL FOR PRESIDENT.

WASHINGTON, May 6, 1872.

What is Thought and Said About the Extraordinary Conference on the Alabama Claims—Fernando Wood's Arraignment of the President.

By common consent, irrespective of party feeling, the partisan gathering at the State Department, on Saturday morning, to discuss a vital international question from which every party consideration should have been excluded, is declared, in and out of Congress, to have been a grave mistake—an error not surpassed in the whole course of treatment of the difference with Great Britain. When General Banks received an invitation to the State Department to discuss the Alabama claims, he was so confident that he had been addressed as a member of the Committee of Foreign Relations, instead of as a mere supporter of the administration, that he approached his democratic colleagues and entered into conversation with them on the subject in such a manner as left no doubt that he supposed them to be in possession of similar invitations. The ignorance of the democrats speedily notified General Banks of his error, but it was too late to retrieve it.

The Washington despatch of last night to the HERALD had been telegraphed back in full this morning and nearly everybody was prepared for some allusion to the matter in the House to-day. But the impressive scene that attended Mr. Wood's arraignment of the Executive would have met the highest requirements of solemnity that could have imposed themselves upon a deliberative body on the most grave occasion. The question was approached and treated with great dignity by Mr. Wood, and though the rulings of the Speaker, supported by Mr. Bingham and the fealty of the majority, overbore the question of privilege that was supposed to give authority for the speech, the Representative from New York gained his material point, and won a support for his argument that was not wholly partisan.

Mr. Wood rose and said he had had the honor to have been appointed, at the commencement of this Congress, by the Speaker a member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs. He had discharged the duty faithfully and diligently, not omitting one meeting or avoiding any of the duties. The committee from its nature was non-partisan. It had no cognizance of political subjects or questions of a party character. No discussions of this nature had ever taken place in it. For himself, he had looked upon the grave questions relating to our intercourse with foreign nations as above party, and had always maintained that, on subjects so vital and delicate as those which involved the peace of the nation, no other considerations should be thought of other than those appertaining to the honor and interest of the United States. With such sentiments, upon which he had always acted as a member of the committee, he was the more astonished at the course which had been pursued towards him upon the occasion to which had risen to refer. On Friday morning last the Cabinet resolved upon a meeting of the two Committees of Foreign Affairs of the two houses, with the democratic members of each to be left out. At about two o'clock on that day the republican members of each committee received "commands" from the President to convene at the State Department at two o'clock the following morning. This order was signed by General O. E. Babcock, the military secretary of the President. Promptly at the hour each of the republican members attended, the President and Secretary of State present also. The Committee of Foreign Affairs of this house had been thus called together by the President, and the three democratic members had been excluded from the meeting. By what authority does the Executive convene a committee of this house? and by what authority can a committee of this house be convened at all in part, and not as a whole? He charged, therefore, that the President had grossly infringed the privileges of the House, and had invaded his rights as a member of the House and a member of the Committee of Foreign Affairs. A proceeding on the part of the Executive so extraordinary must have been prompted by some important consideration. It is impossible that at this late day the motive could have been merely for consultation on our present relations with England. Our advice has never been sought before. Some higher object must have prompted the movement. Can it be that the Legislative Department is to be now invoked through the action of a partisan majority to cover the intended retreat from our untenable and unjust position? Or is it designed to obtain Congressional countenance to some coup d'état which will require popular support? Or is the small device an effort to prevent exposure, by the democratic opponents of the administration, of facts which may prove disastrous to the party in power as represented in the government? Whatever may be the motive, I protest against this Executive interference with my rights as one of the representatives of the people, and denounce it as a usurpation and unwarranted invasion of the privileges of the House of Representatives.

General Banks said this did not involve a question of privilege such as the House could take cognizance of.

The Speaker said he did not see a question of privilege in it.

General Banks said Mr. Wood was wrong in his assumption that there had been a meeting of the committee as such.

Mr. Wood asked whether he (General Banks) had not had a notice for the meeting, as stated by him (Mr. Wood), and whether this notice had not been signed by General Babcock, the military secretary of the President, and whether he had not met the President and the republican members of the committee there?

General Banks replied that he was invited to meet the Secretary of State at the State Department.

Mr. Wood said he had asked General Banks questions which he had not answered, and that he desired a reply, yes or no.

General Banks admitted that he had been invited by a note from General Babcock, and that he had met the President and the members of the committee as stated.

Mr. Wood said he had, then, fully sustained his accusation. Comment was unnecessary.

The Speaker ruled that there was no question of privilege.

Mr. Wood said he had but one more word to say, and that was that he had succeeded in calling the attention of the House to the facts. He protested in the name of the people he represented. If the House did not see proper to vindicate its own integrity and independence he could not help it. More than one monarch has lost his head for an attempt to overawe and improperly influence the people's representatives. In this country we do not take off heads for such offences, but we do dethrone power in another way. That the day is not far distant when another ruler will take the place of the present cannot be doubted, and then the legislative department of the government will be restored to all its rights and all its privileges.

The mortification resulting from the unhappy mistake of Saturday last, and its denunciation by Mr. Wood, is increased by the tenor of the latest advices from London. When it was semi-officially announced, on Thursday morning last, that should Great Britain propose to stipulate, in the event that the United States as a neutral should not be liable for remote or consequential injuries or losses resulting from a failure to observe her duties as a neutral, that an arrangement of the nature indicated might be accepted by the United States, there was every reason for Secretary Fish believing, from the tenor of General Schenck's despatches, that such a proposal was about to be made, and the statement was given to the press to prepare the country for the solution of the difficulties anticipated. This record having been made, it is now impossible to deny it. The British Minister, on Thursday morning, recognizing the official tone of the article as published here, immediately telegraphed to Earl Granville what had been done by the State Department, thus giving the British Ministry the opportunity to profit by our premature exposure of the new position taken up, and from which we could not consistently retreat. Sagaciously pushing this advantage, the British Ministry advised Earl Granville to maintain the same attitude that had been assumed before Parliament, and to encourage no expectation of a concession such as was invited. The despatch of Earl Granville to Mr. Thornton, on Thursday night, after the Cabinet session, was based upon this advice. The expected proposition on the part of the United States was not misunderstood. It was argued that we had presented in our case claims for consequential damages, and had distinctly prefaced that portion of the case with the caption:—"The tribunal should award a sum in gross to the United States." As the Geneva Board could only act in a judicial capacity it was impossible—even admitting the claims were within the treaty—for the arbitrators to establish an international principle, such as we declared we were only contending for, when it was distinctly avowed that a pecuniary award was asked. The proposition of Earl Granville to us must necessarily be based upon the English construction of the treaty, and with the information received that day from Washington, together with the premature publication of the attitude of our government, it only remained to ask us if we waived our pretended claim under the treaty. If so, then Her Majesty's government was willing to admit that she would not ask for consequential damages under circumstances similar to those which the United States claimed had justified her presentation of such a claim.

This was the proposition which reached the State Department on Friday. We had diplomatically fished for an easy solution of the difficulty, and the result was stated in these despatches of yesterday which occasioned the meeting at the State Department on Saturday.

The President, tired and disgusted with the efforts made to patch up the case, firmly declared to-day that there was but one solution of the question. He said to a Cabinet officer, "You may rely upon it I will not sanction, from this time forth, any suggestion for the disposal of the controversy. It must meet its fate at Geneva. We have declared to the whole world that the question of consequential damages is one for the arbitrators to decide, and if England takes the responsibility of denying it our government cannot be blamed. I will not back down or withdraw our case."

It is stated to-night that a despatch of this tenor was sent to General Schenck as a reply to the British proposition of Thursday last. The result is already anticipated in official circles, and a failure of the treaty apprehended. The President has been painfully aware, for weeks past, of the unpleasant position in which the Secretary of State has placed the country by his management of this whole business. Early in April he consulted with his personal friends as to the propriety of making a change in the head of the State Department, but was advised that such a step at that time would be construed as evincing a want of confidence in Mr. Fish, and would poorly excuse his long retention at the head of the State Department. Mr. Fish, too, feels deeply mortified at the condition of affairs and the embarrassment he has caused the administration. It has been a favorite expression with him, when approached for information which he did not feel at liberty to give, that he was only the President's clerk, and that he was the proper person to apply to. This assumed diplomatic title is now literally true, for the President dictates what must be sent to Schenck, and Fish merely does the clerical work. The President has taken the field in person and has assumed command of the State Department.

Will Grant Withdraw from the Presidential Canvass?

It is useless to deny the very evident fact that the Greeley-Brown ticket is growing in favor. As the impulse on the part of the democrats in support of the proposition for a regular ticket dies away, as it certainly is dying away, the feeling in favor of another candidate at Philadelphia than General Grant finds an increase of friends. The proposition, or supposition, that Grant would withdraw, originally looked at as preposterous, is now a matter of serious consideration. Whispered suggestions that either Blaine or Boutwell would make a better run against Greeley than Grant have grown in strength of atterance, until now they are talked aloud in the departments and at the Capitol. The number of democrats who have retreated from their first declarations of opposition to the Cincinnati nominations is greater to-day than it was yesterday, and will be still greater to-morrow. In fact, it is now among the probabilities, as well as the possibilities, of the future that Mr. Greeley will receive the democratic endorsement. Republicans who up to a recent date have been acknowledged Grant men now admit that Grant is the only stumbling block in the way of a reorganization of the old party in all its strength and purposes. "Why, then," they say, "shall we not put up some other men, like Blaine or Boutwell, in whose favor Mr. Greeley cannot fail to withdraw, and thereby reduce the canvass to an old-fashioned contest between democrats and republicans?"

The South Carolina Contested Seat.

The House Committee on Elections to-day decided to report in favor of A. S. Wallace, the sitting member from the Fourth South Carolina district. The indictment of Mr. Wallace by the South Carolina courts for perjury, in taking the iron-clad oath, it is said will soon be effected. In 1862, at Yorkville, in that State, he made a speech to a Confederate battalion, urging them to go and fight and win glorious names, like the patriots of King's Mountain, and promising to send his youngest son—his eldest having already enlisted—into the service as soon as possible.

The Texas Contested Seat.

The action of the House Committee on Elections in the case of N. T. Clarke, of Texas, is regarded by his friends as hasty, as the Adjutant General of that State is now on his way here with testimony to show that it has been impossible for any one to take testimony against Giddings, the democratic contestant, owing to the existence of a reign of terror, which makes it unsafe for any one to even express an opinion in favor of Clarke. Giddings has been proved to be a member of the Ku Klux and other similar organizations, and it is stated that his election was secured by intimidation. General Clarke expects to have a strong case to present to the House, notwithstanding the adverse report of the committee.

Mr. Sumner's Public Schools Bill.

Mr. Sumner failed again to-day in his efforts to force a consideration of his bill for equal rights in the public schools of this District. He will continue to insist on action regarding it until he succeeds in making a final determination of the subject.

The Case of Captain Preble, of the Navy.

A Naval Court of Inquiry has been in session here for several days, having for its object an investigation into the circumstances connected with the dismissal of Captain G. H. Preble from the navy by Mr. Lincoln for allowing the Florida to enter the harbor of Mobile. Captain J. N. Maffit, the Confederate corsair chief who had command of the Florida, is the most prominent witness, and testified that he sailed in under English colors, and Preble, consequently, did not know who the strange vessel was until she got abreast of his ship and gave him a broadside which fairly riddled her hull. Preble has been restored with loss of rank, and now demands a definite acquittal from all the charges against him. Captain Maffat's testimony was prompted by a chivalric desire to do justice to a brave and gallant enemy. The evidence in the case was closed to-day.

Mail Steamer Subsidies.

The Senate, in Committee of the Whole to-day, having under consideration the Postal Appropriation bill, defeated the Australian and Brazilian mail subsidy proposition by striking out the former and reducing the latter to such a small sum that it was withdrawn by its friends.

Mr. Morton's proposition to abolish the franking privilege was also defeated. To-morrow, when the bill comes up for final consideration, the effort will be renewed to include the subsidies, and the lobby is confident of success.

The Drake Amendment.

The House Committee on Appropriations to-day decided to strike out the Senate amendment to the Deficiency bill re-enacting the Drake amendment prohibiting jurisdiction by the Court of Claims over claims presented by pardoned rebels. The bill subsequently came up for consideration in the House, but the amendment was not reached. No doubt it will be defeated when it is reached, and its final fate will be decided by a conference committee.

Heavy Congressional Humor.

The grim humor of Eldridge, of Wisconsin, suggested to him the appropriation of Pig Iron Kelley's high pressure Tariff bill to stave off for another week the Supplementary Civil Rights bill which each Monday brings up for action. Under a title that epitomized the selfishness and sophistry of ultra protection the perspiring Reading Clerk droned through forty pages of Kelley's political economy, when he was checked by the withdrawal of the bill, which had served its turn in strangling social equality.

The Tariff Question.

An attempt by Mr. Dawes to open the way to separate discussion of the different subjects of the Tariff bill, backed up by a threat to slaughter the whole bill if his motion was not accepted, in accordance with what he asserted was the agreement made in the Committee of Ways and Means, raised a storm of indignant opposition from his colleagues, and an ignominious defeat befell this effete leader of the House in his effort to force a suspension of the rules to pass his motion.

The Debate on the Deficiency Bill.

The Deficiency bill came up for consideration to-day, and afforded the usual opportunity for partisan sharpshooting and the genial pleasantry of Mr. Cox. Mr. Roberts, of New York, made earnest opposition to an appropriation of $6,000 for the removal of the American Legation from Florence to Rome, and won a reduction of half the appropriation. The government workmen failed to get from the House an overruling of the Senate's decision that eight hours' work meant ten hours' pay, though Mr. Farnsworth fought like a Trojan for his amendment.

The Internal Revenue Bureau to be Investigated.

Commissioner Douglas, of the Internal Revenue Bureau, is to be investigated by the House Committee of Claims. The sharp edge of investigations being taken off by too frequent and constant use, the Revenue Commissioner has been quietly turned over to a sub-committee for examination.

Protest Against the Admission of Utah.

A memorial was presented in the House of Representatives to-day from about 3,000 citizens of Utah protesting against the admission of that Territory into the Union as a State. It was accompanied by the affidavits of thirty apostate Mormons against Brigham Young and the Mormon Church.

Outrages in South Carolina.

A telegram was received to-day at the Department of Justice from the United States District Attorney at Charleston, S. C., in which he says that a Deputy Marshal just returned from Marietta, Ga., reports that Capers Scott, Wesley Scott and William Harris, whom he had arrested on a bench warrant issued by the Circuit Court, were forcibly taken from him by a crowd of thirty or forty men. The men arrested are duly indicted for violating the Enforcement act. The Circuit Court at Charleston has adjourned, and a special term has been ordered for August.

The Democratic National Convention.

While the democrats in Congress are agreed that the 4th of July shall be the time for the assembling of the National Democratic Convention, they are not in harmony as to place. St. Louis, Louisville and Indianapolis are respectively named.

MEXICO.

Speeches on American Railroad Enterprise in Mexico—Will It Lead to the Absorption of the Country?

TELEGRAM TO THE NEW YORK HERALD.

CITY OF MEXICO, April 27,
Via HAVANA, May 6, 1872.

Mr. Plumb, at the banquet in this city to the members of the press, made a speech, in which he said:—

"The railway system of the United States is rapidly approaching the borders of Mexico. The International Railroad Company of Texas, which I represent, aided by liberal donations from Texas, and controlled by influential Northern capitalists, is now constructing a railroad across Texas, and next year it will nearly reach the Rio Grande. It is desired to continue the line through to the capital and to the Pacific coast of Mexico."

Señor Clemente Vasques, in the course of a speech at the same banquet, answered the objections of patriotic Mexicans who fear the introduction of American enterprise in the country will lead to its subjugation by showing that an equilibrium of races existed on this Continent as well as in Europe. In this was the strongest guarantee of Mexico's independence, and the Americans recognized it as well as the Mexicans. For if the United States government required four years to subdue the Southerners, a people largely made up of the Latin race, how could it sustain itself with the Anglo-Saxon element in the minority, as it would be with the absorption of Mexico and the admission of a number of new Latin States?

The projectors of the Mexican World's Fair are active in their preparations for the exhibition.

A telegraphic demonstration is proposed in honor of the memory of the late Professor Morse.

Reinforcements for the Defenders of Matamoros—Another Advance on the City to be Made by the Revolutionists.

MATAMOROS, May 6, 1872.

The steamer Tabasco arrived this evening at the mouth of the Rio Grande from Vera Cruz, with a reinforcement of several hundred troops for this city, and munitions of war.

General Cortina has been relieved of the command of the regular cavalry, which has been incorporated into the force of General Cevallos, and, with the reinforcements just arrived, makes his available force about two thousand regulars and one thousand National Guards. Cortina has still a small volunteer cavalry force acting as scouts.

The revolutionists are said to be encamped near Reynosa, where they are throwing up earthworks on the Rio Grande, which forms one flank of their camp. It is said that General Martinez is coming down from the mountains with 2,000 cavalry to join Treviño and Quiroga at Reynosa, when another advance will be made on this city.

TEXAS.

Military Protection Against Mexican Cattle Thieves.

TELEGRAM TO THE NEW YORK HERALD.

BROWNSVILLE, May 6, 1872.

Captain McConnell arrived here this morning with a company of United States cavalry, from San Antonio, and reported to General McCook at Fort Brown for duty in protecting the frontier from the Mexican cattle thieves. Another company of cavalry reached Ringgold barracks a few days ago, and General McCook has orders to mount a company of infantry to look after the cattle robbers. With his mounted force the border will have some little protection from the Mexican raiders, but in view of the disbanding of Cortina's volunteers a strong force will be needed here to see that they do not come to Texas to renew their robberies during their enforced idleness on the Mexican side.

Attempt to Reopen the Miller Muddle.

Bennett's Ferry Bill Ordered to a Third Reading.

NEW YORK HARBOR BLACKMAILERS.

Mr. Judd's Expose of the Doings Down the Bay.

ALBANY, May 6, 1872.

There was a larger attendance of members of both houses this evening than is usual on Monday nights, and as a consequence there was no serious hitch in the general business transacted. The early morning train brought up nearly everyone of the New Yorkers, which extraordinary circumstance threw the members of the rural districts into a fearful state of trepidation, as they have learned to their cost already this session that the Gothamites never rise early for nothing. They somehow got it into their heads that something was up, and so, long before the hour for the assembling of the two houses had arrived, the country law makers were on hand in strong force, evidently determined not to get euchred out of anything good that might turn up by the wily metropolitans. However, their fears that the New Yorkers had a big thing to rush along proved groundless, as no private metropolitan pet measure was as much as hinted at during the evening; even reform Jimmy Hayes contenting himself during the proceedings in talking theology with the religious Houghton in such loud whisperings as to call for the scowls of the solemnity observing Speaker. Mr. Tobey raised quite a breeze by introducing a resolution to but when it was ascertained that the reopening of the case was demanded from the fact that Southwick, the witness who went to Canada, or somewhere else, where the committee could not go after him, had suddenly turned up ready to testify, the breeze subsided and the resolution was passed. It is believed that Southwick will tell all he knows about insurance and the Miller way of doing it, and as the committee must close the case in two days they will no doubt apply the pumps to him shortly after sunrise to-morrow. He has been subpœnaed, and a careful watch is being kept upon his movements lest he should take a sudden fancy to leave for that wonderful bourne commonly designated by writers of the period as "parts unknown." His testimony may change the present aspect of Miller's case very materially, but there are those who contend that it will have little weight with the committee when sifted down by his cross-examination.

REOPEN THE MILLER INVESTIGATION,

BENNETT'S FERRY BILL.

Mr. Bennett succeeded at last to-night in getting his Ferry bill dragged into daylight out of the close closets of the Committee on Commerce and Navigation, where it has been slumbering for some time past. He made a motion to discharge the committee from further consideration of the bill, and that it be ordered to a third reading, when he saw his way clear, and suddenly found himself confronted by an objection from Mr. Fields, who finally withdrew it. The bill was then ordered to a third reading. It will be remembered that the bill as it now stands compels all the Brooklyn and Williamsburg ferry companies, with the exception of the Roosevelt ferry, to carry passengers for two cents, the latter company being compelled to sell bunches of ten tickets at the ferry boxes for twenty-five cents. The bill reduces the charges for vehicles from fifteen to twenty per cent, according to their bulk.

THE NEW YORK CHARTER

and the Registry bills were reported favorably by Mr. Judd from the Committee on Cities. The charter, as reported, is precisely in the same condition as when it was passed by the Senate on Friday, with the exception that it puts the screws down upon Comptroller Green in one important particular—to wit, that nothing in the section authorizing him to audit claims shall be construed so as to admit of his even disputing any claim ordered to be paid by laws passed by the present Legislature.

THE BEACH PNEUMATIC RAILROAD BILL VETOED.

The Governor sent in his veto of the Beach Pneumatic Tube bill to the Senate, and its friends and advocates are in sore distress in consequence. In the veto he takes the same grounds against the bill that he did last year. Mr. O'Brien, in the Senate, introduced a bill which, in view of the present strike of the small pipe men in New York, is considered a very important one. It provides that hereafter the Common Council shall have the power to fix and regulate the wages of all mechanics and laboring men employed under the various departments. The bill has only one short section, and could have been read a third time and passed at once by unanimous consent. Mr. O'Brien made a motion to have it read a third time and passed accordingly; but Mr. Tiemann, with his usual blind perversity, interposed his objection, so that if it is necessarily delayed in its passage the mechanics and laborers in the service of the department may know who to thank for their misfortunes.

THE NEW YORK HARBOR MASTERS.

Mr. JUDD presented this evening the report of the Committee on Commerce and Navigation concerning the Harbor Masters' abuses in New York. The document begins by saying that numerous witnesses were examined and the investigation disclosed a system of extortions which may not inappropriately be characterized as organized piracy upon the commerce of New York. In addition to paying the regular fees provided by law, vessels are subjected to a series of exactions almost from the time of their arrival to their departure.

First—Ship owners and agents generally testified that the Harbor Masters were rarely, if ever, to be found on their districts, and then when applying for berths they were compelled to negotiate with middlemen.

Second—These middle men are generally towboatmen, wharfingers, and sometimes stevedores. They make the arrangements and receive the extortion fees which are levied for docking vessels. Witnesses testified that they had been compelled to wait for days in some instances before procuring berths because they refused to pay the "stakes" demanded. The amounts so levied and extorted are generally embraced under the head of "TOWAGE FEES" OR "FOR SERVICES RENDERED." Large numbers of these bills were presented to the committee, who swore that no services whatever had been rendered.

Third—A few firms enjoy a monopoly of the towage business. Witnesses testified that they could not obtain berths unless employing these firms, which systematically blackmailed them. A member of one of these firms unwillingly confessed that he and his partner paid $1,000 down for the monopoly and 2½ per cent afterwards. This was done in accordance with an arrangement effected, and the witness understood the percentage was to go to the Harbor Master of his district, John Brice. It thus appears that as individuals styling themselves the "New York Harbor and Lighterage and Stevedoring Company" paid $15,000 and a percentage to the Health Officer and his representative for the privilege of levying blackmail down the bay, so other parties have bought and sold the same privilege in port.

Fourth—While the alleged sums collected were not traced directly to the pockets of the Harbor Masters, they must have been owing to their exactions. Is it reasonable to suppose that they have been willing to incur all the opprobrium for the extortions and leave the spoils to others? Though an opportunity was afforded, none of them took the stand to rebut the damaging charges made against them.

THE CAPTAIN OF THE PORT,

who is placed over the Harbor Masters, testified that he had become convinced in his own mind that a system of extortions prevailed, though he had looked with as much surprise as the committee at the extent of these exactions. He added:—"I think in regard to the abuses in this port some have outgrown others, and my knowledge of public affairs has convinced me that this is a period of general corruption."

Fifth—While these abuses are not of recent date, having prevailed to a greater or less extent for years, they have greatly multiplied for the past two years. The testimony of all the witnesses was to the effect that they were now far more oppressive than ever before.

Sixth—The effect of this systematized spoliation upon the commercial interests of New York has been very perceptible. Ships have been driven to Baltimore and to other ports. The report concludes as follows:—

THE SHIP OWNERS AND SHIP AGENTS

cannot wholly escape the responsibility for these growing abuses. In some instances they have tendered these bonuses in order to facilitate the movements of their vessels, and thereby encouraged blackmailing. Furthermore, they do not appear to have displayed the energy which might have been expected in resisting the exactions to which they have been subjected. True, many of them testified that it was useless to make opposition, and yet there can be no doubt that united, systematic and vigorous action on their part might have secured some relief. The fact, however, that there has not been such action does not palliate the guilt of the offenders. The State is in duty bound to guard her shipping interests against the spoliations of freebooters in the disguise of officials. These interests look with confidence to this reform body for relief. A bill which aims to afford such relief has been laid before the Legislature.

THE COURTS.

The Jumel Estate Case—The Lilienthal Tobacco Suit—Rights of Foreign Consuls—Alleged Blackmailing—A Lottery Mystery—Jurors Fined—Business in the General Sessions.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT.

Opening of Term.

Yesterday Judge Shipman opened the term of the United States Circuit Court, and set down days for the hearing of cases.

The Case of Bowen vs. Chase—The Will of Madame Jumel.

In this case, so frequently reported in the HERALD, counsel on both sides said they were ready to go on; but the Judge stated that, owing to the pressure of business and the length of time the cause of Bowen vs. Chase would occupy, it must go over till the October term.

The case was accordingly postponed till October next.

A Distillery Suit.

James Thompson, Moritz Mellinger and John L. Woolsey, all distillers, gave bonds some time since in the sum of $20,000 each that they would pay all taxes and assessments that might be due from them to the government. It is alleged that they failed to comply with the terms of the bonds. Their bondsmen were sued to recover the amount due the government. The cases were called on for trial, but the sureties failing to appear judgment was given for the government.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.

The Lilienthal Tobacco Case—Motion for New Trial Denied.

The United States vs. C. H. Lilienthal.—Not long since a verdict was found in this case for the government in the United States District Court, condemning $200,000 worth of tobacco. A motion had been made for a new trial on the ground that Judge Blatchford in charging the jury erred in stating that a verdict could be found for the government without absolute proof of the irregularities supposed to have been committed, it being within the province of the jury to infer, from other unquestioned circumstances in the case, that such irregularities had been committed by the defendant. Judge Blatchford has written a lengthy opinion on the subject denying the motion. The verdict for the government, therefore, stands.

UNITED STATES COMMISSIONERS' COURT.

Alleged Violation of the Revenue Law.

Before Commissioner Shields.

The United States vs. Charles P. Meyer.—The defendant, who keeps a lager beer brewery at 77 and 79 Essex street, was held in $1,500 bail for examination on a charge of having taken stamps off lager beer kegs and reused them.

The Case of Harry Edwards—The Rights of Foreign Consuls.

Before Commissioner Osborn.

The United States vs. Harry Edwards.—The defendant, as previously reported in the HERALD, is charged with having threatened to stab the mate on board the Norwegian ship Skjold, on a voyage from Australia to this port. The defendant has been, on a writ of habeas corpus, discharged by Judge Blatchford; but he was rearrested for the purpose of having an argument made by counsel representing the Consul for Sweden and Norway as to whether it was within the power of a United States Commissioner to hold a person not a citizen of the United States on such a charge as the above on the requisition of the Consul. Mr. J. A. Goodlett argued that there was nothing in the acts of Congress to justify the detention of Edwards; and counsel for the Consul having urged the opposite view, the Commissioner reserved his decision.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.

Pay of the Court Stenographers.

Before Judge Ingraham.

It will be remembered that Judge Barrett on last Friday granted a peremptory mandamus requiring the Board of Audit and Appropriation to appropriate money for paying the stenographic reporters of the State Courts the arrearages of their salaries. This mandamus was returnable yesterday. On the matter being brought before the Court, Mr. Strahan, on behalf of the Board, asked an adjournment. The Court granted the adjournment, with the understanding that if the orders of the Court in the matter of paying these salaries were not obeyed an attachment would issue against the Board. It is difficult to divine the ground of opposition to paying these claims. Their legality and justice are not denied, and certainly there are no officials in the pay of the city government who earn their money by harder work, their labor, in fact, being almost unintermitting. However, it is only a question of time. They are bound to get their pay.

An Illegal Commitment.

Application was made for the discharge of James McGrath from the House of Refuge. It was shown that the commitment was not made out in the form prescribed by statute, no offence being stated in it. The Court held that this was sufficient ground for granting the application and at once ordered the prisoner's discharge.

Emma R. Couch, the Alleged Blackmailer.

In the case of Emma R. Couch, accused of an attempt to blackmail Rev. A. B. Carter, Judge Brady yesterday rendered the following decision:—"The counsel were advised that the amount of bail to be required would be $5,000, and such will be the formal order. I contemplated writing an opinion expressive of my reasons, but on reflection think it better not to pursue that course. The defendant is entitled to a full investigation, wholly unaffected by an opinion even in a collateral proceeding. The offence charged is grave, the punishment severe and a trial should be secured."

SUPREME COURT—CIRCUIT—PART I.

A Lottery Mystery and Trying to Double One's Investment.

Before Judge Van Brunt.

William S. Montgomery vs. G. E. Simmons, et al.—The plaintiff claims that he bought of George E. Myers, who claimed to be an agent of the defendant, a certificate in the Kentucky State Lottery. Suit was brought to recover $4,537 50, being, as alleged, double the amount of a certificate of a share, with interest. Mr. Myers testified that in July, 1868, he handed to Mr. Simmons a sealed envelope containing a paper marked "Kentucky, E, July 8, 1868, from 38 to 1, all first, for $5,000," with $2,278 75 in money. The witness was asked to explain the meaning of the endorsement. It was insisted that the paper itself should be put in evidence. It was afterwards conceded that the complaint was not properly framed, and leave was asked to amend the same. This being objected to, the Court refused to grant the request, on the ground that it would introduce a new and distinct cause of action, and the suit being for a penalty, and the act under which it is brought highly penal in its nature, the party being entitled to receive double the amount he had paid, the law should be held to a strict construction, and the party should be held to his declarations in the complaint in the first place. Plaintiff's counsel then asked permission to withdraw a juror, which was objected to and objection sustained. A nonsuit was then moved for by the defendant's counsel, which the Court promptly granted.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Recorder Hackett.

Empannelling of the Grand Jury.

The May term of this Court was opened yesterday, His Honor the Recorder presiding. Assistant District Attorney Fellows represented the prosecution. The Grand Jury was empannelled, sworn and briefly charged upon the statutes, which the presiding Judge is obliged to enumerate when charging a grand inquest. F. E. Amidon was selected to act as foreman.

Minor Cases of Larceny.

John Ellmers pleaded guilty to an attempt at grand larceny, he having on the 11th of April stole a tapping machine worth $60, the property of Hugh K. Garvin. He was sent to the Penitentiary for one year.

Charles Fischer, charged with stealing $90 worth of clothing on the 15th of April from the express wagon of Samuel Eldridge, pleaded guilty to an attempt at grand larceny. Two years and six months in the State Prison was the sentence.

The Fifteen Year Old Murder Case Again Before the Court.

Mr. Howe called the attention of the Court to an indictment against Michael Hayes for homicide, and recapitulated the history of the case, which has already been published. The murder is alleged to have been committed fifteen years ago in the Fourth ward. The counsel asserted that the main witness for the prosecution was a man named Rochester, an alleged notorious blackmailer. He was keeping out of the way, and although he had sent a notice to the District Attorney that he was sick, he (Mr. Howe) had witnesses in court to show that Rochester was in two lager beer saloons yesterday at Hoboken.

District Attorney Fellows, in reply, said that he would take steps to have Rochester appear and confront the accused at an early day.

The Recorder intimated that if satisfactory proof were produced that Rochester was not sick, and he failed to appear next Monday, Hayes would be discharged upon his own recognizance.

Henry Ritter (a boy) pleaded guilty to an indecent assault upon a little girl, and being only thirteen years of age he was sent to the House of Refuge.

Charles Collins was tried upon a charge of breaking into the premises of William Sloan, a stevedore, at 34 Old slip, on the Fourth of March, and stealing two pieces of old rope. There was no legal evidence to sustain the allegation, and the jury were instructed to render a verdict of not guilty.

William Wilson, jointly indicted with Charles O'Neill for burglariously entering the premises of William Rudolph, 233 Thompson street, and stealing $23 worth of boots and shoes, was also tried. Mr. Fellows abandoned the charge of burglary and asked for a verdict of petty larceny. The boy Wilson proved a good character, and in view of this evidence the jury found him guilty of petty larceny, with a recommendation to mercy. He was sent to the Penitentiary for three months.

BROOKLYN COURTS.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

A Divorce Case.

Before Judge Tappen.

In 1870 Mrs. Juliet Renwick brought a suit against her husband, Frederick W. Renwick, for an absolute divorce on the grounds of adultery. The case was sent to a referee, and subsequently defendant moved to amend his answer, alleging insanity at the time of committing the acts charged, but the referee denied the motion and reported in favor of allowing the divorce applied for. The report was confirmed. After this a motion was made by plaintiff for alimony, and the referee, to whom the matter was referred, reported in favor of allowing her $1,600 per annum, it appearing during the examination that plaintiff was an heir of the Rhinelander estate and had a yearly income of $5,000. The case came up yesterday on a motion to have this report confirmed. Decision reserved.

THE DELAWARE FISHING DIFFICULTY.

A Commissioner has been sent to inquire into every particular connected with the fishing trouble between the States of New Jersey and Delaware. He will probably return to Trenton to-day. The telegraph was freely used by Governor Parker yesterday, who is determined to have all the facts. Attorney General Gilchrist, Governor Parker and the Commissioner will hold consultation to-day. The words of Governor Parker to the Jersey fishermen are assuring. He will not leave the consideration of the matter until the rights of Jersey fishermen in the Delaware Bay and River are perfectly secured; but in securing their rights he is also bound to respect the rights of the authorities of Delaware. Governor Parker is taking a perfectly constitutional course, as all those who know him may rest assured, and is determined that the fishermen of his own State shall have those privileges that belong to them. Beyond that he will not ask, and he believes that the authorities at Wilmington will not deny those when there has been a little talk.

OTHER THEATRES BURNED.

At a quarter to eight o'clock yesterday morning a fire broke out in the dome of Niblo's Garden that in one hour and twenty minutes completely destroyed the theatre and all the property contained in it. When first noticed by Officer Cush, of the Metropolitan Hotel, there was but a slight issue of smoke from an opening in the roof, and the officer, thinking it was caused by some work in the theatre, gave no alarm for some time. Finding, however, that the

VOLUME OF SMOKE

continued to increase, he ran into the theatre, and at that moment two men at work on the stage shouted, "The theatre is on fire!" Cush gave an alarm, and in an almost incredible space of time a number of engines were on the ground. A second alarm was sounded and the

ENTIRE FIRE DEPARTMENT

was almost immediately on the spot. This second alarm attracted the attention of Ben Sherwood, the machinist of the theatre, who was on his way to the building on a Bleecker street car. He asked one of the men on a passing engine where the fire was, and the location was no sooner shouted to him than he jumped off the car and started in the wake of the flying engine. By this time the fire had eaten its way into the store room, under the dome, and in the immense quantities of properties laid away there. When the fire had evidently gained control of the roof over the auditorium, Ben Sherwood ordered the lines of the drop curtain to be cut, in order to save the stage from the draught of the front of the house. Some little difficulty occurred in the way of the drop, and Mr. Sherwood snatched up an axe and cut the lines, shouting at the same time to the firemen on the stage below to get out of the way of the barrel, and the curtain fell with a tremendous report to the stage. This for some time checked the fire on its march to the stage, but the dense masses of smoke that swept through the building stifled the men and made their work exceedingly laborious. The firemen were everywhere playing water, tearing up the timbers and flinging out portions of the property in the building. They swarmed like bees on every part of the burning theatre; but, unfortunately, nothing could save the well known place of amusement.

Fifteen minutes after the curtain was dropped the dome fell, and the sound of the tumbling mass of masonry sounded like the report of a cannon as it fell into the dress circle and parquet, smashing all before it. The dust of the falling stones, mortar and burning timbers added to the already heavy cloud of smoke that had gathered on the stage and made it almost impossible for the men in the wings and flies to do anything to stop the work of the flames in that direction. Mr. Sherwood had managed to get into the wardrobe room over the carpenter's shop by means of a ladder placed against the outer wall in Crosby street, and,

BLINDED AND BURNED WITH THE SMOKE,

sparks and the flames, flung a quantity of the wardrobe out of one of the rear windows into the street—the value of the wardrobe being stated at $25,000. As fast as the master machinist flung out the tights, shields, helmets, casquets, robes, ermine capes and Roman togas William Vail, Jim Leo, Gill Sherwood and a number of other stage assistants received the property and took it into Mrs. Flanagan's, opposite, and Niblo's Saloon, at the rear of the theatre. From the wardrobe Ben Sherwood crept out on the flies and dropped upon the stage. Desiring Flanagan, the night watchman, to follow him, he struggled through the smoke across the stage, gained the office on the "O. P." side, and from there rescued the scene plots of which was to have been produced some time during the month of August. As a number of the men were endeavoring to open a window in the rear to give Mr. Sherwood some air the new drop which was intended for "Lalla Rookh" took fire, and blazed up like so much powdered paper. This curtain had only been finished on Saturday last, and was considered a masterpiece of art. The flames from this drop caught some of the sets hung for the performance of "Lalla Rookh" last night, and in a few minutes the wings on both sides of the stage were being

A NEW SPECTACULAR PIECE,

EATEN UP BY THE DEVOURING ELEMENT.

The whole inside of the theatre was then a mass of seething, dashing flames, that swept from side to side and from wall to wall, lapping all the substance in its way, and leaving only a black, disordered pile of ruins. Properties, furniture and dresses were flung from the rear of the house to the front, chairs were torn up and flung in dozens about the auditorium, the stage and corridors. Books, music, manuscripts and instruments of theatrical warfare were dashed in all directions, and although the firemen were pouring tons of water into the house the flames seemed to slack nothing of their fury. A number on the stage, seeing that all hope of saving anything more at the back of the house was useless, endeavored to get through the auditorium, but the flames were at the time so fierce that they found it impossible. Headed by Ben Sherwood, they rushed around the theatre to the front on Broadway, and Mr. Sherwood, seizing a ladder, made for the private office of the firm, and was fortunate enough to be able to save all the private papers belonging to Jarrett & Palmer, and the

SAFE, CONTAINING TWO THOUSAND FOUR HUNDRED DOLLARS IN CURRENCY.

Among these papers were some very valuable documents connected with the theatre for some ten years back and a number of deeds belonging to Jake Zimmerman. In that office were also a quantity of jewels, statuary and objets de vertu, the property of Jake Zimmerman, and many of them were saved, although some of them were considerably damaged by the handling they had received. The tool chest belonging to the master machinist was then got through one of the windows that opened upon the garden, and $1,500 of Ben Sherwood's property saved. Three other chests, belonging to William Well, Jim Leo and Gill Sherwood, were also got out in the same manner; but this was all the goods belonging to the men employed on the stage that were saved from the conflagration. The saving of the tool chest of the machinist was a most fortunate occurrence; for the insurance upon it expired last Wednesday, and there were many valuable implements that could not be easily replaced. When the theatre had been burning about half an hour Tom Oakly, the machinist from the Grand Opera House, noticed the flames dashing against the walls of

THE METROPOLITAN HOTEL,

and, fearing they would get in at the windows and attack the house, he called the attention of Mr. Sherwood to the fact. The latter gave instructions to the people in the hotel to close all the iron shutters on the outsides of the windows, and with the exertions of the firemen the hotel was fortunately saved. In addition to the numerous streams poured into the burning building by the members of the Fire Department, the men belonging to the theatre had three streams from the engines belonging to the theatre and the men in the hotel had one. Of course, not having the same force of water, these streams were not so effectual in stopping the flames as those from the powerful engines of the Fire Department, yet they proved of great value on the lower portions of the building, and especially on the walls of the hotel fronting the garden that divides it from the theatre. The men working these engines, streams, and the

BUCKET CORPS,

were relieved at regular intervals, their places supplied with fresh men and the work kept going constantly on. When the dome fell the curtain was standing and the wings, flies and stage were yet untouched, but about two minutes afterwards the flames took in the middle of the curtain and that set fire to the entire rigging of the stage. In about twenty minutes the cordage of the flies was eaten away and the flies fell, carrying with them the rain box and thunder drum, which made a terrible report as it crushed upon the stage. The lime lights then tumbled down and

A UNIVERSAL CHAOS

set in. Fourteen minutes and a half after the scenery gave way the stage fell in. The barrel of the curtain had communicated the fire to a star trap close to the second entrance, left, and the flames dashed in long tongues beneath the boards until great started loose from their places, began to roll, and then the entire stage gave way, falling a distance of twenty feet The machinery underneath the stage, which was all designed specially for the theatre by Ben Sherwood, was all destroyed, and it was estimated as being worth at least one hundred thousand dollars. The stage itself was an original conception by the inventor of the machinery, and was so constructed and adapted to the working of the theatre that one might sit upon any part of it and at the pronouncement of a wish he at once was transferred to some mysterious region below. A simple cog screw, or wire, effected this wonder movement, and everything in the place seemed under the control of the leading mind. The paraphernalia underneath the stage is supposed to have been the most perfect of its kind in the world and was capable of

MASSES OF MACHINERY,

LIFTING A HUNDRED TONS.

A transformation scene lately purchased in England, and which is now on its way out here on the steamer Glenhaven, would have tested the machinery to a considerable extent to develop some of its beauties; but the stage people felt thoroughly confident the levers in the cellars were capable of any theatrical need The scene will soon be landed in New York, but there is as yet no Niblo's Garden to put it into. Shortly after the stage went the back wall fell in, and in the place where stood the magnificent theatre was a broad gap breaking out into the firmament beyond. The garden walls also fell down, and the side ones will have to be pulled down. After the garden walls the floor of the wardrobe, over the carpenters' shop, gave way, and nearly buried Captain Clinchy, of the Fourteenth precinct police, who was working in the neighborhood at the moment, beneath the ruins This gentleman was one of the first to enter the theatre after the alarm of fire was given, and was at work in the orchestra endeavoring to get out some of the musical instruments when the dome was blazing. The

CONDUCT OF THE POLICE AND FIREMEN

during the trying ordeal deserves the highest praise The police were watchful, patient and hardworking, while the firemen were the marvel of all present A number of theories were started yesterday about the

ORIGIN OF THE CONFLAGRATION,

but none of them seemed to have any more solid foundation than rumor One of these was to the effect that the fire was the work of an incendiary who had got into the hotel, thrown something combustible upon the roof and then escaped. What the motive for such action could be was the question of almost universal discussion, but no one seemed to be able to arrive at a satisfactory solution of the matter. Another cause of the fire many people said was spontaneous combustion. Mr. Zimmerman, the treasurer of the theatre, stoutly maintained that nothing of that kind could possibly take place in that part of the house, as the goods stored away there were entirely free from any such accident. Several persons well versed in fires gave currency to the idea that it must have been an accident, but said no one ever went near that part of the building with a light, and so the origin of the calamity is still shrouded in mystery The fire throws 350 people out of employment, who had been engaged at salaries ranging from $6 to $200 per week.

THE PEOPLE BELONGING TO THE HOUSE

One of the three men in the theatre at the time of the breaking out of the fire said to a reporter of the HERALD:—"I was in the theatre fixing the footlights. Paul Sermi, the assistant gas man, and Edward Quigley were working with me At half past seven o'clock I heard a kind of crackling noise overhead. I looked up to see where it came from and discovered fire extending from the rigging loft to the dome, in a place where fire is never used for any purpose whatever. I immediately attached the fire hose and tried to reach the fire, but the stream would not reach, and in an incredible short time the flames had completely enveloped the dome of the building. In the meantime I sent the janitor to sound the fire alarm. Before the firemen arrived the gas border and proscenium dropped to the floor with a tremendous crash."

The following is a list of the losses sustained by the burning:—

The building has been injured to the extent of $125,000.

Jarrett & Palmer lost property to the amount of $90 000 They are insured for $7 500

The Metropolitan Hotel was injured to the extent of $5,000 by smoke and water, and the furniture was damaged to the extent of $6,000. Insured.

The building 594 Broadway was damaged to the extent of $3,000, but it is insured for $25,000.

A number of Masonic lodges in the same structure were damaged to the extent of about $2,000; and other property in the neighborhood of the fire was injured to the extent of $5,000.

The only people belonging to the theatre who suffered any considerable loss by the fire were the treasurer, Jake Zimmerman, who lost about $2,500 in personal estate; Ben Sherwood, the machinist, who suffered to the amount of about $500; Charles Morton, the stage manager, who lost a quantity of valuable stage wardrobe; Signor Operti, the leader of the orchestra, who lost some rare music, and Julius Weingarten, the first violin player, who had a very fine Amati violin, worth $250, burned up. An examination into the cause of the conflagration will be held before the Fire Marshal this morning

SCENES AND INCIDENTS.

The scenes and incidents to be witnessed outside the theatre and hotel while the fire was raging, and during the entire day, were varied, and some sad and some amusing. The inhabitants of Houston street, Crosby street and the vicinity, who looked upon the theatre in the light of personal friendship, were loud in their lamentations over its unexpected destruction, and many of the women who depended upon it for a living were bathed in tears.

The sanctimonious portion of the population of the city, who look upon laughter as a crime and theatre-going as an unpardonable sin, shook their holy heads and pronounced judgment upon the unfortunate sinners who had been rash enough to tempt the judgment of Heaven by ministering to the vulgar tastes of the depraved through the medium of women's legs. The old theatre goers on the other hand, were loud in their lamentations over the destruction of an edifice within whose walls so many brilliant triumphs in tragedy and comedy have been gained. The audience which used to muster so largely on Black Crook nights in the gallery wondered how all the tights and spangles used to adorn the forms and the limbs of beauty would reappear, and whether Stalacta, with her beauteous legs, would ever again appear to gladden the hearts of the great unwashed and summon her fairy legions to victory. The ballet girls employed in "Lalla Rookh" were on the ground early, pictures of sorrow and misery For the time being there was an end to bouquets and suppers, an end to admirers, with more money than brains, waiting outside to carry the charmers home. Apart from these considerations they were deprived of the means of livelihood on which they had calculated for the summer, and it was no wonder they gave full vent to their grief.

The panic in the Metropolitan Hotel when the fire broke out was intense. It being Monday the number of transient guests was not so large, but still there were more than two hundred in the house. When the news spread among them that the theatre was on fire, and that the flames were spreading to the hotel, they appeared, rushing along the corridors and down the stairs, bursting open chamber doors, many of them in their mad hurry not waiting to dress, appearing with little more covering than nature had endowed them with. In the rooms everything was thrown into inextricable confusion. Trunks were opened, boxes tumbled here and there, many of the guests, endeavoring to lower their effects from the windows, made the confusion dreadful. Half dressed women and children rushed into the street and sought shelter in houses near, painfully awaiting the result of the conflagration. The panic, however, did not last very long, as the safety of the hotel was soon assured and the frightened guests were enabled in a short time to return to it. The maid servants shared the panic of the guests, and for more than an hour the interior of the building was a perfect Babel. The males were not conspicuous for their gallantry, the majority of them having seized their effects and fled precipitately upon the first approach of the flames.

During the forenoon crowds of persons collected in the vicinity of the hotel. All the interest, however, lay within the building, and the sightseers were disappointed to find entrance denied, and they were forced to satisfy themselves with staring at the bare walls.

The fire had not been in progress more than half an hour when Bleecker street, Broadway and the vicinity were almost impassable from the block of street cars and vehicles of every description. Travel was interrupted for more than three hours, and the tired horses and conductors had for once an opportunity to rest.

Mr Jarrett, one of the lessees of the theatre, seemed the least interested person present, and smiled in answer to the expressions of sympathy that were rained upon him. Some of the spectators gave utterance to the absurd opinion that some champion of Stokes had set fire to the theatre in revenge for the bad character of Stokes given in "Black Friday," but the idea was too ridiculous to receive credence and was scouted by all sensible people.

When the disaster became known the actors and managers of the city came promptly to the front in aid of their brother artists, the managers of the Olympic and the Theatre Comique having tendered their houses for benefits—an example which is to be followed by the other managers The following has been received from Jarrett & Palmer.—

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC

The destruction of Niblo's Garden having suddenly deprived of employment a large company of artists, with a numerous auxiliary corps de ballet, &c, &c, the undersigned beg leave to announce that a benefit will be given at the Grand Opera House on Wednesday evening, May 8, to the ladies and gentlemen of the company, and on Friday evening, May 10, to the corps de ballet and auxiliaries.

JARRETT & PALMER,
NEW YORK, May 6, 1872 JOHN F COLE.

TO THE THEATRICAL PROFESSION

Ladies and gentlemen of the theatrical profession who feel disposed to volunteer their services for either or both of the benefits to be given at the Grand Opera House on Wednesday and Friday evenings of this week, in aid of the company and corps de ballet, who, by the destruction of Niblo's Garden, have been suddenly bereft of employment, will please assemble at the Metropolitan Hotel, room 117, at ten o'clock Tuesday morning.

JARRETT & PALMER
NEW YORK, May 6, 1872 JOHN F COLE

ARREST OF SUSPICIOUS CHARACTERS.

While the fire was at full headway Detective Dunn, of the Eighth precinct, discovered two young men, named William Jones and John Madden, acting in a suspicious manner. He discovered Jones had his left hand crossed over his breast and close to the left hand vest pocket of a man looking at the fire He also discovered Madden manipulating another man in a similar manner, and, surmising their intention, arrested them. They were conveyed to the station house in Prince street, and were arraigned before Justice Cox, at Jefferson Market, yesterday afternoon, who looked them up for trial.

OLD NIBLO'S.

Reminiscences of the Early Days of the Theatre.

Mr. William Niblo, the founder of Niblo's Theatre, lives in comfortable retirement, amid the pictures and statuettes and articles of bijouterie for which his long acquaintance with dramatic art and artists has given him a taste, in a brown stone front, No. 50 West Twenty-eighth street. He is one of the few theatrical managers of past generations who made money and kept it. He has been out of dramatic circles now for twenty years, but his name has been kept prominent in connection with theatrical matters because it was borne by the handsome theatre just destroyed. Mr. Niblo, however, has not lost his taste for theatres nor his regard for the members of the profession. He is a gentleman, eighty-three years of age and small of stature, but so active and bright that he looks less than sixty. On hearing the news of the fire yesterday he wended his way down to the scene of the disaster to tender his advice and condolence to old employés under the late management who had been employés under his own. He was full of reminiscences of the palmy old days when Niblo's Garden was a garden indeed.

In 1830 he opened the garden. It was not intended to be a theatre, but what its name might imply—a garden, similar in appointment and purpose to the then famous Vauxhall Gardens of London. Mr. Niblo at that time was living on Pine street, and as business commenced to encroach upon his domestic domain he determined to move so far out of town that the needs of commerce would never push him to move again. So he opened this garden on the corner of Prince street and Broadway, built him a dwelling house in a corner of it, and permitted the public to roam about it and take refreshments, ice creams and lemonade at the tables. It was not like the various city "gardens" (so called) of the present day, walled in by brick and mortar, cut off from all the rays of the sun and all the breezes of heaven, and unblessed by the beauty or fragrance of a single flower. It was a real garden, with fountains of real water and real shrubberies, real greenhouses, real fruits, real roses, real sunshine and real air. That was forty-two years ago. before even the NEW YORK HERALD was in existence. Many gray-headed old citizens, who were then gay young men about town, given to flirtations on the Battery, living in their handsome residences on lower Broadway and in Park row, used to take their sweethearts then to Niblo's Garden behind a spanking team to get a breath of the country air and enjoy an evening out of town. Canal street had just been filled in and the bridge over the canal had just been removed. Prince street was a lane. Bond street was unopened. The only theatres in town were in Chambers street, Park row and the Bowery. Washington Irving, under the nom de plume of Jonathan Oldstyle, was writing criticisms upon the manners of the fine people who attended the Park Theatre, near the corner of Beekman street. Billy Burton was amusing the "gods" of the pit on Chambers street. Hamblin owned the Bowery. The pit then was what is the parquet now. Ladies never entered it. It was only for the b'hoys and the bootblacks. There were no newsboys worth mentioning. It is not known who was the adventurous individual that opened up this the best part of the theatre to the better class of theatre-goers. Whoever he was his name should be honored. He probably yet lives.

Notwithstanding the croaking of some of the worthies of that day, who thought Niblo was going too far from the city, he prospered as well as was to be expected. He prospered, indeed, so well with his garden that two years after he had erected it he erected a summer theatre, which was so far a part of the garden that the performances could be viewed from the refreshment tables in the open air. He found that the extra expense of this establishment was not adequately repaid by his little garden patronage from the city. People had to walk all the way from Chambers street. Park row and the Battery or else hire a carriage to enjoy an evening at his place. It was considered something of a walk in those days up to Niblo's Garden, and Niblo found he must do something to facilitate public travel in his direction. He hit upon the English omnibuses. He sent over to London and bought two omnibuses, the same in pattern as those that now bump and rattle their way along our great thoroughfare. They were named the Lady Clinton and the Lady Van Rensselaer. With these he brought the crowds from the old City Hall to his theatre doors for twelve and a half cents. From that time on his theatre prospered. Burton, the great comedian, performed summer engagements for him. The Ravel troupe were great cards. He only used the theatre for dramatic performances during the summer. It was too far out of town for people to be expected to come in the winter. He used it for a ballroom in the cold months. Finally, becoming cramped for space, he turned the theatre into a refreshment and music hall and built a larger theatre. It fronted on Broadway and was open on the rear and sides, so that people could go into the garden between the acts and take ice cream or other refreshments. Nearly every young New York blood treated his girl to the theatre and refreshments in those days. It did not cost a small fortune to do it, as it does now. Those were hard money days, when horse hire, ice cream and theatre tickets were reasonable. The admission to Niblo's (theatre and garden) was fifty cents; positively no reserved seats—first come take the best. During the summer of 1837, a series of concerts, given under the direction of Mr. Watson, in which Mrs. Watson, Mrs. Bailey, Mrs. Knight, Mr. Plummer and Mr. T. Bishop sang—names long since forgotten save by the older residents of New York and the theatrical historians. The Ravel family appeared later in the same season, and still further on toward the autumn a vaudeville company was introduced, under the direction of Joseph Jefferson (father of "our Joe") and John Sefton. This company produced a succession of musical farces. But the Ravels were the great "hit" of the season. In the spring of 1838 a dramatic season began, under the management of Sefton, and again with the aid of the Ravel Troupe. This season ended on the 21st of September. In June, 1839, the Seguins appeared at Niblo's, in alternation with the Ravels, and "Billy" Burton had a benefit during the season In October of that year Mr. Wallack engaged Niblo's, and removed his whole company thither; Mr. Vandenhoff and Mr. George Hill severally making their first appearance after their return from Europe, the former in Hamlet, and the latter as Nathan Tucker, in "A Wife for a Day." On the 2d of October Miss Vandenhoff made her début in America there in the "Hunchback" On the 16th of October the opera of "Amilie" was produced, with Seguin, Wilson and Miss Shirreff On the whole the season of 1839 was a great success. In the early summer of 1840 Chippendale was manager at Niblo's, and in 1841 Mr. Buckstone was the chief attraction. In 1842, the Ravels, then at the zenith of their fame, performed four nights a week, and the town went mad over their comicalities. The 'Green Monster" was among the novelties produced. A change came over the place at the beginning of the season of 1843, when the music hall was disconnected from the theatre. The latter was opened May 19, with a company of French comedians and vocalists from New Orleans, and the "Gardens," as they were now called, invited the public on the 6th of June—John Sefton's company providing entertainments in English. The French company produced the "Fille du Regiment" for the first time in this city on the 19th of July, 1843. In 1844 Mitchell gave up the Olympic and emigrated to Niblo's to open a summer season in June. This season lasted till October, and then Mitchell reopened his own theatre. Corbyn reopened Niblo's in the fall of 1844, and during the two following years the theatre was a continued success; but on the 18th of September, 1846, a prosperous season was brought to an untimely and disastrous end by the first fire, which caught early in the morning (like that of yesterday) and totally destroyed the building. The loss was about $60,000, $50,000 of which fell upon Mr. Niblo, and the remainder upon Gabriel Ravel. After the fire the site was unoccupied for three years, during which Mr. Niblo remained in retirement But the memory of his former triumphs and the disgust at his present idleness soon became too much for him, and he made an offer to Mr. Van Rensselaer, who then owned the property, to rebuild the theatre on a ten years' lease. The terms were agreed upon, and the work of rebuilding was commenced in the spring of 1849, and was prosecuted with such energy that on the 4th of July of the same year the building just destroyed was opened to an immense audience. The first performance in the new theatre was by the Ravel Troupe.

In 1850 Brougham and Chippendale were associated in the management, and the presence of the bewitching Mary Taylor added a fresh attraction In June of that year Charlotte Cushman played Meg Merrilies. In December, 1850, another disaster occurred—Adelaide Lehman, of the Ravel Troupe, having been burned to death by her clothes taking fire during a performance. On the 18th of September, 1851, Madame Anna Thillon made her first appearance. Tom and Harry Placide both used to perform in the days of the earlier Niblo's The Havana Opera Company created a sensation that is remembered yet by the young swells of that time, now grown old. Hackett, Cooper, Fanny Kemble, the elder Booth, all figured on its stage Actors who are now famous then came on the stage to say "My Lord, the carriage waits."

In those earlier days of Niblo's there were no calcium lights, no machinery moved by steam. The city gas was furnished only as far up as Grand street. They had to use candles for footlights at Niblo's until the enterprising manager sent over to England and got a gas machine by which he could manufacture gas of his own. There were no transformation scenes, no elaborate sets extending apparently far back into miles and miles of woodland The scenery was only a few plain daubs that would pass very well if the spectator was not disposed to be critical. When the Ravels performed Mr. Niblo says he had to go to extra expense to get up scenery for them. It cost, probably, a thousand dollars for the properties necessary to produce their magic effects creditably. To show how marvellously theatrical carpentry has improved since then, the loss by the fire of yesterday in the scenery and appointments of "Lalla Rookh" alone is estimated at $30,000 In those days, too, some of the old Knickerbocker gentry wore knee breeches and powdered hair. There were no city railroads The Boston stages, on their swinging springs and with "boots" behind, used to come swinging down the Bowery to the stage office in Park row. Fifth avenue was unknown. There was no Union square. Fourth avenue was Harlem Lane.

In 1852 Mr Niblo sold out his interest wholly to Mr A. T Stewart. The hotel meanwhile had been built about the theatre, on the ground that was formerly the garden The opera was the "Crown Diamonds." Flotow's "Martha" was first produced in November, 1852, and Madame Sontag first appeared on the 10th of January, 1853. Simultaneously with Sontag's appearance the prices at Niblo's were advanced from fifty cents to one and two dollars.

The Ravels took their farewell in the fall of 1853. In 1854 Niblo's was enlarged and redecorated, and Castle Garden, opened by Max Maretzek in the same summer, became its great rival. Parodi appeared in January, 1857, and Madame Cora de Wilhorst made her début on the 20th of the same month. Placide, Brougham and Blake divided the honors of the following season. Boucicault made the "hits" of the fall and winter season of 1858-9; and later in 1859 Burton played his last of Toodles, Cuttle, Micawber and all the rest. Since then the success of the theatre is a matter of contemporary history. It has seen some most interesting dramatic events. The production of "Arrah na Pogue," the first appearance in America of Fechter, the remarkable run of the "Black Crook" and the introduction of the nude ballet en masse into American theatricals are of too recent occurrence to need further mention. There was an alarm of fire in 1867, but it proved unfounded. Of late the theatre has been dedicated almost exclusively to spectacle and the limb drama, and in this lowly but profitable sphere of artistic effort has yielded several fortunes to successive managers. The "Black Crook" was probably the greatest theatrical triumph financially ever produced upon any stage, and ran three long seasons. To its author alone it is reported to have given $100,000, and this is but a fraction of the total profits realized. It will be a relief to young men with predilections for fast life, and to the thousands of our country cousins who indulge in periodical views of the "elephant," to know that Mr Stewart has already determined to rebuild the theatre by next September. Many will doubt, however, whether it would not have been better for the theatre to have perished in a blaze of glory forever than to thus have its life renewed and condemned to the slow agonies of a natural decease—its inevitable fate, ere many years have fled, owing to the rapid migration of theatre goers up town. With the exception of the Old Bowery the theatre just destroyed was the oldest theatrical landmark in the city.

OTHER FIRES IN THE CITY.

In Thirty-fourth Street.

Shortly after one o'clock yesterday afternoon a fire broke out in the Manhattan Market, at the foot of West Thirty-fourth street, on the North River. The flames raged furiously for a long time and completely destroyed the building, which was estimated as being worth, including the site, $1,000,000. The damage done by the fire is estimated at $5,000. The building is considered one of the largest roofed structures in the world.

In Spring Street.

Shortly before eight o'clock last night a fire broke out on the first floor of the six story brick building 97 Spring street, occupied by Nathan, Son & Robbs, manufacturers of straw goods, causing a damage to stock and building of $300; fully covered by insurance.

In a Tenement House.

Yesterday morning the fourth floor of the tenement house 601 Eleventh avenue, occupied by Martin Cooney, was found to be on fire, causing a loss to building of $300, and to furniture $100, on which there was no insurance. The fire originated from a defective flue.

In Fourteenth Street.

A few minutes after nine o'clock last night the extension room on the first floor of the boarding house No 355 West Fourteenth street, occupied by Helen Stockton, was discovered to be on fire. Before the flames could be extinguished the house was damaged $300 and the furniture $200; insured. The cause of the fire is unknown.

The Wooster Street Fire.

Yesterday afternoon, James Kinney and William McDonald reported at the Eighth precinct station house that while searching in the fifth floor of the building 24 and 26 Wooster street, in which the two McSherry brothers were burned to death they found the leg of one of the brothers, which was fearfully burned, also a gold chain and an Australian gold piece, which were left at the station house.

AQUATICS.

Boating at Yale—Inauguration of the Season—The "White Cup" for Single Sculls Won by H. S. Potter, Class '72—New Barges for the Annual Spring Races.

NEW HAVEN, May 6, 1872.

With the opening of the summer term and prevalence of fine weather the boathouse of Yale College is beginning to present a lively appearance. Much comment has been made by the students with regard to the proceedings of the Boating Association of American Colleges, which met on the 12th ult. at Worcester. Yale did not gain much by that meeting, as she, together with Harvard, wished to have all the details of the regatta then arranged, but could not, and had hoped for a three-mile straight-away race, but that also fell through.

The choosing of the course, which important point was left to the captains, will be decided on the 1st prox., and as it has been agreed "that the crews should be chosen from one department only," those of the Scientific who have been in training several months in the gymnasium will now have to be dropped. One of these, Mr. Davenport, was to have been the stroke in the Inter-collegiate Regatta, and is considered decidedly the best man in the University for the position.

Many here are in favor of challenging Harvard for an outside race, to come off about the 12th of July—rowing, of course, with a crew from all departments; but the proposition has not yet assumed much shape, but will be taken up and decided upon this week.

Three new barges have just arrived at the boathouse, two from Boston and the other from New York. They are intended for the University, Scientific and Freshman crews.

The boating season was inaugurated here on Saturday by a single scull race. The prize was a fine silver cup, fifteen inches in height, and known as the "White Cup," given by a prominent citizen of the "City of Elms." There were six entries, viz.:—

H. S. Potter, class of 1872.
C. Dewing, class of 1873.
J. W. Smith, class of 1873.
S. L. Boyce, class of 1873.
G. F. Bennett, class of 1874.
H. D. Weeks, class of 1874.

The latter ran into an oyster stake soon after starting, and consequently withdrew. There was quite a heavy fall of rain during the race and a strong wind and heavy tide against the contestants on the homestretch, thus making good time impossible. The race was won easily by H. S. Potter in 16:20 the distance being one mile up the river and return.

The annual spring barge races will be rowed in about three weeks, and the class crews are now in active training for these events.

UNION THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.

Anniversary Services at the Union Square Church—The Graduating Class of 1872.

The thirty-sixth anniversary of the Union Theological Seminary was celebrated at the Madison square church last evening. Quite a large number of persons were present, and the services were commenced by the choir singing an anthem. Prayer followed, after which the hymn "How Beauteous are Their Feet" was rendered by the congregation. The Rev William Adams, D. D., next delivered a very stirring address on behalf of the directors, in which he set forth the object of the seminary, and defined the difference between sociality and individuality in religion.

Dr. Henry B. Smith then read his address to the graduating class of the present year. He spoke of the four recognized professions—law, medicine, theology and literature—and said that those whom he had the pleasure of wishing godspeed upon their mission had chosen the most difficult of them—a profession in which it was absolutely necessary to study hard, so as to be able to argue against and confute the erroneous theories of sceptics and atheists. A minister did not go into his profession to make money, but only to gain a living, while diffusing theological erudition to those around him. He urged upon his listeners the advisability of their being orthodox, and defined the duties incumbent upon ministers in a very lucid manner; after which he uttered a very touching farewell to the young ministers whose studies he had personally superintended for the last three years.

After a prayer by the pastor the services terminated. The following is a list of the graduates:—Charles E. Austin, Francis M. Baker, Turner S. Bailey, William G. Ballantine, Marcellus Bowen, Henry L. Bunstein, William I. Chalmers, Chal. D. Chapman, Colbert M. Des Islets, James F. Donaldson, Samuel V. S. Fisher, Lewis R. Foote, Clarence Geddes, Edward H. Harvey, Matthew C. Julien, William G. Marts, George E. Milton, George B. Newell, Charles S. Newhall, Charles Ogilvie, Eugene C. Olney, Samuel Parry, John Rednath, Jr., William R. Scarritt, Adelbert J. Schlager, Thomas L. Sexton, David L. Smart, Lewis F. Stearns, Rodney L. Tabor, Josiah Tetley, James M. Thompson, Edward P. Whallon, J. Henry Whitehead, Oscar U. Whitford.

ANTI-USURY.

Meeting of the American Anti-Usury Society at Cooper Institute.

The third annual meeting of the American Anti-Usury Society was held yesterday morning at ten o'clock in room 24 Cooper Institute.

The PRESIDENT (Mr. Edward Palmer) called the meeting to order, and delivered a few well-founded remarks on the evils of usury In the course of his address he said that usury was the prime and most prolific source of poverty, and that it was not the object of the society to impoverish the rich but to protect the poor.

The meeting was then addressed by John Ives and E. H. Heywood, of Massachusetts; Mr. G and J. R. Ingalls, of New York; and Mr. Ivelyn, of Rhode Island.

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:—

Resolved, That usury, modernly called interest, is essentially unjust and demoralizing.

Resolved, That the abolition of the usury system is the only way possible to re-establish moral rectitude and stay the swelling tide of moral corruption.

Resolved, That as usury is the principal source of the poverty of the working people, by abolishing usury we shall thereby abolish poverty, without taking anything from the rich, but by doing away with a system which takes all the net product of labor from laboring men to double the capital of capitalists.

After some further business the meeting adjourned.

THE SWAMP ANGELS.

Burial of Colonel Wishart, One of the Victims of the Outlaws.

Brutal Character of the Murdered Man's Wounds—Reported Reappearance of Henry Berry Lowery, the Outlaw Chief.

RICHMOND, Va., May 6, 1872.

By the arrival of the Wilmington, Charlotte and Rutherford train this evening I have additional particulars of the terrible wounds received by Colonel Cron. M. Wishart, when he was killed by the Swamp Angels, together with the details of his burial. The remains were interred in the old Wishart family burying ground, at Lumberton, on Saturday afternoon. They arrived on the train from Shoe Heel that morning, at seven minutes past eleven o'clock, and the interment took place at four P. M. During the interval the body of the murdered ex-Confederate soldier and gentleman was viewed by a large number of sorrowing friends and by quite a concourse of bereaved and outraged citizens The greatest feeling was manifested at the loss of this estimable man, and there was a subdued but intense excitement visible. At the appointed hour the remains were consigned to the grave, and then the pent-up grief of the people found vent in tears and loud expressions of sorrow.

THE APPEARANCE OF THE CORPSE

was natural. It was arrayed in a neat but plain alpaca suit. Upon examination the fatal wounds proved horrible beyond conception. In the right side there was a large and gaping hole, made by a full discharge of buckshot close to the body, in which the four fingers of a man's hand could be placed with ease. One of the shots went entirely through the body from side to side, making a most ghastly looking wound. The right arm and also the right leg and thigh were broken and mutilated. Another shot pierced the brain, making its entrance behind the right ear and coming out near the left temple. There were also several buckshot lodged in the left shoulder, and this latter wound seemed to have been inflicted while Wishart was prostrated upon the ground in the last agonies of death. A more brutal massacre of a human being has scarcely ever before been perpetrated by fiends in human shape.

THE WISHART FAMILY

is one of the oldest and most respected in the county, the parents of the deceased being now living there, and none are more esteemed and respected.

Colonel Wishart had made several attempts to capture the outlaws and he was feared by them more than any other man in the county. He was also engaged in writing a history of the lives and deeds of the outlaws, from which a HERALD correspondent made copious notes some months since when in that section.

THE CHIEF OF THE OUTLAWS SAID TO BE ALIVE.

Nothing has been heard from the outlaws, Stephen Lowery and Andrew Strong, since they committed this most foul deed. A singular report, which brings Henry Berry Lowery, the outlaw chief, back again from the grave, has reached my ears. A person residing in the dominions of the outlaws, who has been intimate with the whole band, asserts most positively that he met Henry Berry Lowery, who has been reported dead for months, on Friday, the day succeeding the murder, face to face, and there was no mistaking him. This statement is generally discredited, and the people of this entire section of country have the most implicit faith in the demise of the notorious Rob Roy of Carolina.

THE JERSEY CITY MURDER.

Inquest on the Body of Frederick Doblestein.

The inquest on the body of Frederick Doblestein, who was murdered in the cellar of a house in Bergen street, Jersey City, last Thursday, was commenced before Coroner Burns yesterday.

The first witness examined in the case was Mrs. Wildebrant, who testified as follows:—I live at 100 Bergen street, the same house where Doblestein lived before his death; I know Henry Lohre, and he boarded in the same house with the deceased; the house was kept by Mrs. Wilke; I never heard a word of dispute between Doblestein and Lohre; he had trouble with Mr Klentworth; the quarrel had reference to something that Klentworth had said about Lohre's wife, who is now dead; Lohre said he would take a knife out of his trunk and kill Klentworth, if the key he had would fit it; if he could get the knife he would wait on the stairs until he would come home at night and kill him; I never saw him have a knife; this was about eight o'clock, and the statement was made in Mrs. Wilke's room, the third floor; on the same evening he went into Klentworth's room and said he wanted to see him; I saw him again the same evening on the stairs, talking in anger at Klentworth; Klentworth was standing in the door of his room, and Lohre asked him to come out if he wanted anything of him; Klentworth declined to come out; I heard Mrs. Wilke tell Lohre to go over to the other house, on Essex street, whither she was about to move; the neighbors do not speak well of Mrs. Wilke; I made the beds yesterday morning; I found a bag with straw in it about the size of a pillow, with blood on it, in one of the beds; it was not the bed in which John slept; I never heard until Thursday morning last of the death of Doblestein; myself and husband went down in the cellar to the woodhouse, and there found Doblestein on the ground, with his feet on the steps of the cellar; he was dead; all the people in the house came down to see the dead man but Mr. Lohre; the deceased had no shoes on; had only his drawers and shirt; I saw Doblestein the night before his death, about six o'clock, and he was not drunk; Lohre had been drinking.

Mrs. Dina Krantz testified, through a translator, Mr. William Gossenburgh, as follows:—I live at 28 Essex street, and I resided there the night that preceded the death of Doblestein; I lived on the second floor; I knew the deceased, and he had a good reputation; I did not know Lohre; about eight o'clock in the evening Lohre wanted to get a knife out of his trunk to kill Klentworth; I did not see him have a knife; he did not have a trunk, it was a green box (here a piece of the chest was shown, which the witness recognized as belonging to Lohre); I did not hear any trouble with any one; about ten minutes after eight o'clock he showed me how he would kill Klentworth; he did not have any knife; Lohre was under the influence of liquor that night; Doblestein went to Hoboken about six o'clock that evening; the next morning he heard of Doblestein's death, but I did not see Lohre until seven o'clock that morning; Mrs. Wilke's character is not the best; she drinks liquor; there was a jealousy between the boarders in reference to Lohre and Mrs. Wilke; the hook shown to the witness belonged beneath the window on the second floor; I do not know how Doblestein got killed; I saw the hook in the wall at five o'clock that evening; it was fastened over the cellar way; Doblestein slept in the rear of the house; Lohre threatened to stab Paul Klentworth in the evening, and made the threat in my presence.

The bag which was found with blood on it in one of the beds by Mrs. Wildebrant was here produced and identified.

Lena Cooke was the next witness. She testified as follows:—I resided in the same house with the deceased, with my sister, who lives on the first floor; I went to bed a little past two o'clock that morning; I did not sleep in the room over the cellar; when the clock struck two we heard a noise, and I said to my sister it sounded like the fall of milk cans; the little dog, which was in the room, made a funny noise; he whined, and I let him out; in about five minutes he commenced the same noise again, and I admitted him to the room again; I heard no noise after; I heard people walking around in the house before I went to bed, and asked my sister if they staid up so late every night; it was about half-past one o'clock when I heard the footsteps.

Louisa Derricks sworn—I live in the house 100 Bergen street; I knew the deceased and I knew Lohre; I never heard any trouble between Lohre and the deceased, but I knew there was trouble between Lohre and Klentworth; I was at 100 Essex street, cleaning the rooms, and I saw Lohre with a knife, and Mrs. Wilke took it from him; he said he would do something to Klentworth; Mrs. Wilke gave the knife to me, and in the evening I gave it back to Mrs. Wilke (the knife was shown and recognized by the witness). Mrs. Wilke has got a big mouth and drinks much beer, and talks much among women; I heard a milk wagon about two o'clock, and I heard a rattling of the milk cans; I then heard the water turned on in the yard for a minute or two.

Dr. Prendergast, County Physician, was next sworn, and testified that Doblestein came to his death by congestion of the brain, caused by the injuries he received.

The inquest was then adjourned.

THE TRIAL OF MRS. M'CARTY.

UTICA, N. Y., May 6, 1872.

THE CONNECTICUT SENATORSHIP.

PREPARING FOR FERRY'S SUCCESSOR.

The Contest Likely To Be Between Orris S. Ferry and Ex-Governor Hawley.

Hawley Declared Certain of Election.

The Objections to Ferry—It is Charged That He is Secretly a Cincinnati Convert and Incapacitated for the Position by Illness.

NEW HAVEN, May 6, 1872.

Looming up in the political horizon just now, on the eve of the re-assembling of the Legislature for the active and important duties of the session, are a baker's half dozen or more of disinterested, but aspiring statesmen, who are generally inclined to submit to the inconveniences of banishment to Washington for six years, if they can thereby succeed Senator Ferry, whose term expires with the present Congress. Already the politicians are training for the contest that is to be decided, in all probability, this week, and each one seems to be calculating how he can be on the winning side, and thus secure a fair share of the offices of the federal government that a Senator is supposed to always carry in his pockets.

While many, including a number who have been stereotype candidates almost ever since they made their first speeches at town meetings, in the halcyon days of youth, are unfortunately for their aspirations only one can reach the coveted goal, and each one is living on hopes long deferred and sighing for some sudden change in the political kaleidoscope that will throw his brilliant corners to the light and exhibit to the admiration of his fellow politicians the prismatic beauties of his character as a statesman and a man. In every turn, however, of the kaleidoscope the political fortunes of ex-Governor Hawley or Senator Orris S. Ferry come to the surface, and lesser lights fall away to the bottom and rear, to await a more fitting season for the recognition of their merits and their claims upon the party, which in this State means simply the administration republicans; for, as far as I can ascertain, in the "land of steady habits." Indeed, I have made diligent inquiry whether any portion of the old republican party is in favor of the Cincinnati oblique movement, and fail to learn that a dozen republicans who in the past had taken any prominent part in the State politics have declared for it.

HUNGERING AND THIRSTING AFTER THE POSITION,

LIBERAL REPUBLICANISM HAS NOT YET TAKEN ROOT

The Assembly, as you are aware, stands 130 republicans to 111 democrats, or nineteen republican majority; the Senate stands fifteen republicans to six democrats, or nine majority, so that the republicans on joint ballot have the splendid majority of twenty-eight. I am assured by a gentleman well posted in the sentiments of the newly-elected members that every one of the 148 republicans whose vote must be cast to elect a Senator in place of Ferry is a proclaimed administration man; so that it is quite certain the next Senator, whoever he may be, will be an out-and-out adherent of Grant and his administration.

It is safe to say that, as the Senatorial canvass now stands, the great and opening contest will be between Hawley and Ferry. The former, if one were to judge from the tone of the State press, is half a stretch ahead in the race, but I fear the press in this case may be a

DECEPTIVE BAROMETER OF PUBLIC SENTIMENT.

Governor Hawley, being a journalist of great ability and an able politician withal, naturally attracts to him the gentlemen of his own profession, who feel a pride at all times in seeing their merits and power acknowledged, and consequently it is not certain that the press beats in unison with the public pulse.

It has been a custom in this State rarely deviated from to re-elect a Senator who has proved deserving of the trust reposed in him time and again until it has grown into a popular idea that it is wrong to change an old and tried servant for a new and inexperienced one. This feeling has become a seated conviction with many who admire both Hawley and Ferry, and hence they are working upon the minds of their representatives in favor of the latter. The representatives are, no doubt, about equally divided for these gentlemen at the present time for the first choice, and it is difficult at this time to state positively any one who is likely to win. Before the party go into joint caucus, however, events may transpire to send one up and the other down.

An old and well-known republican said to me yesterday, "I have been identified with the politics of the State for nearly twenty years, and think I know pretty well the drift of the popular current, but for the life of me I could not venture to predict whether Hawley or Ferry stand the best chance. My personal preferences are for Hawley; but, in common with many others, I fear he is inclined to give the administration but a quasi support. It is a suspicious circumstance that Sam Bowles, of Springfield, who is anti-Grant has assumed to champion his cause and force him upon the State; but still in his paper Hawley stands by the administration and pledges himself to its policy and principles. I fear Sam Bowles is damaging him greatly. I tell you, sir, in this State there are no republican soreheads. The people—the merchants, manufacturers, bankers, all—declare that the present government is accomplishing great results for the prosperity of the country, and they want no change. No man can be elected Senator unless he is unequivocally

PLEDGED TO SUSTAIN GRANT'S POLICY.

Hawley is not sufficiently explicit in his avowals on national matters to please the party."

"Is Ferry?" I asked.

"I fear not. Many of us think he is wavering. Some time ago he made a speech in the campaign, and, while he ably extolled the economy of the national administration and the wisdom of the measures passed, he had

NOT A WORD IN PRAISE OF GRANT.

We all felt disappointed. It may have been an oversight on his part, but it has excited much comment upon Ferry. Indeed, I suspect that neither of them are earnest supporters of Grant. Bromley, of the Hartford Post, who is a Cincinnati convert, declared in his paper recently that Grant was not the first, second or third choice for President of either Buckingham, Hawley or Ferry. He is a pretty shrewd fellow, and I know not what authority he has for the statement; but it looks very suspicious, to say the least. I tell you, sir, no man can be elected Senator unless he is for Grant as well as his policy. The people in this State don't care anything about Schurz; but, as to Trumbull, they are surprised. He was from this State, supported the reconstruction measures all through, and a man we have always stood by. Hence we regret to see him to a side track that will lead him to the camp of the enemy."

Since I ventured the inquiry whether it was not probable, in the event of the failure of the republican majority to agree upon one or the other of these candidates, that one of the faction might form a combination with the 117 democrats to elect some other republican more popular with the democracy? The gentleman said that such an eventuality was not at all unlikely, and that if such a combination be formed either Lafayette Foster, Henry B. Harrison, E. K. Foster, State Attorney; General Alfred Terry or Stephen W. Kellogg would, in all probability be selected to fill Ferry's seat in the Senate.

I had a long interview also with another influential politician and wire-puller, who, while hostile to Hawley and working for Ferry, admits that their chances are very evenly matched. He estimates that in New Haven and Fairfield county the entire delegation will be for Ferry, who will have a slight majority in Litchfield; that Hawley will get Hartford county, nearly all of Tolland, a good majority in New London, although Ferry will be strong there, and part of Middlesex, with the chances slightly in favor of Ferry. He is a gentleman perhaps as well posted upon the preferences of the newly elected members as any man in the State, and from his information, apparently candidly given, I think you may safely place for Senatorial honors as follows, on a joint ballot:—

THE STRENGTH OF THE NINE CANDIDATES

County.	No. of Rep. Votes.	For Hawley.	For Ferry.
Hartford	21	21	—
Tolland	12	11	2
New Haven	21	—	21
Fairfield	17	—	17
Litchfield	19	9	10
Windham	21	15	6
New London	20	[illegible]	9
Middlesex	14	7	7
Totals		74	72
Hawley's majority on joint ballot			2

From this estimate you will observe that but little engineering is required to change the figures and give Ferry a majority, and, of course, the result must remain in doubt at least until after a caucus has been held.

It has always been the practice to agree upon a candidate in joint caucus, when each branch of the Legislature ballots separately. If the two houses do not agree a joint ballot is had to determine the choice. In the contest the votes of the 117 democrats must be looked after, and it is certain between Hawley and Ferry if the republicans do not agree in caucus upon their man and go for him as a solid phalanx. Personally Hawley appears more acceptable to the democrats than Ferry, and if they hold out as a united body they can dictate terms to the party who will best woo them in the event of a split in the republican vote. It is a well recognized fact that Ferry's devoted allegiance in the past to the measures of the administration has made him unpopular with the democracy of the State, and it is very likely they will support a new man, in the hope that he may be less enthusiastic in such support. There are many here who believe that Hawley has taken this into consideration, and by encouraging Bowles and other anti-Grant politicians in putting him forward is shrewdly trimming his sails that may prevail this week. What are the preferences of the administration as between Ferry and Hawley can only be surmised; but as the majority of the federal officers in the State seem to be working for Ferry it is probable that he is the most acceptable to the powers at the national capital.

TO CATCH THE DEMOCRATIC WIND

This afternoon I conversed with a federal officeholder and two other gentlemen who are warm supporters of Hawley, and they assure me that "the Governor" has a much larger support in the republican party than the above figures indicate. While admitting that both Ferry and Hawley are able and honest men, they report that Hawley is the favorite, for the reasons:—

First—That Senator Ferry is in a critical state of health, that may result in his death at any time, and as his successor, as the State is so closely politically divided.

Second—That he has not satisfactorily represented the State, and, to quote the words of one:—

"If you take the Congressional Globe files and analyze the votes during Ferry's term, I venture to say you will find him two-thirds of the time. This is owing to his ailment, and not, perhaps, a fault; but the people here want a man who is in such a condition of health that he can be always at his post in the Senate."

Third—Because it is generally believed that Mr.

FERRY IS SECRETLY IN FAVOR OF THE CINCINNATI NOMINEES, and only hesitates to so proclaim himself lest he may be defeated in the ballot for Senator.

One of these gentlemen referred to the advocacy of Ferry's claims by Postmaster Sperry, late Secretary of State, and declared that Mr. Sperry's support was doing much to damage the chances of Ferry. All of them express the opinion that Hawley will secure the nomination in caucus, and that a sufficient number will not bolt to prevent Hawley's election. Great efforts are now being made, they report, to carry the New Haven delegation for Ferry, but they predict that it will be a failure.

The Legislature does not meet until ten A. M. to-morrow. The best information I can get is that the republicans will likely caucus to-morrow evening, and if they unite the Senator will likely be balloted for on Wednesday. As far as my investigations have been pushed it seems very certain that before the close of the week Hawley will have been chosen Senator.

SENATOR FERRY'S ANTECEDENTS.

Orris S. Ferry first appeared in political life in 1855 as State Senator in the Know Nothing interest. He was re-elected the following year, bolted the caucus of his party in nominating a United States Senator and opposed his election. Three years later he was elected to Congress, but was defeated when he presented himself for re-election. When the war broke out he entered the service as Colonel of the Fifth infantry, where he rose to brigadier general. He returned to Norwalk at the close of the war, and in the contest for Senator in 1866 between Buckingham and L. S. Foster, when the fight between these two leaders waxed bitter, Ferry was chosen as a compromise candidate. His career in the Senate is so well known that I need not here recount it. He fell into disrepute at Washington for opposing the St. Domingo scheme; but his subsequent fidelity to his party enabled him to recover his popularity with the administration party, which he still holds, judging from the support given him here by federal officers.

HAWLEY'S RECORD

is a brilliant one, both as a soldier and a citizen. He was born in this State in 1826; graduated at Hamilton College, Clinton, N. Y., in 1847; studied law, and practised in Hartford subsequently. He took part in politics as an anti-slavery agitator, and was active in forming the republican organization in the State. In 1856 he stumped the State in the Fremont campaign, and the following year became the editor of the Hartford Press. The day that President Lincoln called for volunteers he enrolled and entered the three months' service as a captain, where he distinguished himself for bravery and soldierly qualities. He participated with General Terry in the Port Royal expedition as lieutenant colonel of the Seventh Connecticut regiment, and took a distinguished part in the siege at Fort Pulaski, and the battles of James' Island and Pocataligo. In the spring of 1863 he was assigned to executive duty in Florida, but at his own request was relieved and sent to the front in the movement against Charleston under Gilmore. In the battle of Olustee, Fla., his brigade encountered Finegan's veterans and lost thirty-eight per cent of the force engaged. In the spring of 1864 he was transferred to the Army of the James, in command of a brigade of the Tenth corps, and participated in the movements around Petersburg and Richmond. In October of that year he was commissioned brigadier. After serving under Butler in New York he again returned to the Army of the James, commanded a division and went out to Wilmington, N. C., as Chief of Staff to General Terry. In 1866 he was mustered out as brevet major general, having made a most brilliant war record. On returning to Hartford he re-entered the editorial harness, and was elected Governor in 1866. He is a gentleman of fine executive ability and spotless political reputation.

Efforts to Unite the Ferry Republicans and Democrats—The Liberal Movement Taking Shape.

NEW HAVEN, May 6—Evening.

Since despatching my letter to-day indicating the election of Hawley for Senator information has reached me of an effort to unite the Ferry republicans and the democrats. An effort, I am assured, is being made by parties to effect a coalition in Ferry's interest. The belief that Ferry is ready to join the liberals gains strength, and prominent democrats say if Ferry, who is in Washington and reported to be in favor of Greeley, will pledge himself to the Cincinnati ticket, enough democrats are ready to join his republican supporters to elect him. The wire-pullers are certainly at work to this end, but whether it will be successful is doubtful. The liberal movement at last is taking form, and I understand an organization is to be attempted this week to set the ball in motion. It is probable that the republicans will go into caucus to-morrow or next day, but the first ballot will hardly be reached before next week.

STRIKE OF THE PAINTERS.

The Union Demands Eight Hours Work and Present Rates of Pay—The Strike Successful and Expected to Terminate To-Day.

On Saturday evening last a strike was ordered in all the lodges of the Painters' Union in the district of Manhattan Island. The object of the movement was to force employers to pay the same rate of wages now paid ($3 50 per day), but to limit the day's work to eight hours. The Grand Lodge of the International Painters' Union (the organization extends over the United States and Canadas) orders each man engaged in the strike to be paid full wages from its treasury while the movement is in progress. The Painters' Unions of this city have had a membership of about fifteen hundred, which they claim was considerably augmented by the action of yesterday. The strike began yesterday morning, and committees from Demilt Hall, where the organizations met in regular session at an early hour, were busy during the day in visiting the painters at work in all parts of the city. These committees returned to the hall at intervals during the day, bringing with them crowds of workmen, whose names were speedily added to the lists of membership, and also bringing with them reports of the success of the movement on the bosses. Out of some sixty persons or firms in this city by whom these men are employed, about thirty are reported to have acceded to their demands. Those about the hall at the corner of Twenty-second street and Second avenue were quite jubilant yesterday afternoon over their success, and stated that the strike would be fully carried through and their objects attained by this evening. About five hundred new members were enrolled yesterday, of whom the president stated about two hundred came voluntarily.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY.

The Tenth Ward Swarming with Garroters.

About eleven o'clock on Sunday night, while Frederick Trapp, a middle aged German of No. 3 Vandewater street, was quietly wending his way through Attorney street, near Stanton, he was suddenly attacked by four men, one of whom seized him by the throat and threw him down, while the others, kneeling, rifled his pockets. Trapp resisted as well as able, and endeavored to hold one of his assailants, named Michael Mogan. He pursued him through Clinton and Houston streets, and finally in the middle of the block, between Stanton and Houston streets, Mogan was stopped by Officer Martin, of the Tenth precinct. The other three escaped. Mogan was arraigned before Justice Cox, yesterday morning, at Essex Market, and held to answer in default of $2,000 bail. Detectives are on the track of his confederates, and feel confident of securing them.

PROBABLE MURDER IN JERSEY CITY.

Yesterday morning, between one and two o'clock, an affray occurred in Morgan street, Jersey City, which will result very seriously. James Cooney called at the house of Robert Gallagher, an old friend, in that city on Saturday, and they spent their time in drinking for several hours. Gallagher told Cooney to go home and the latter refused. An altercation ensued, Cooney using a knife, with which he attacked Gallagher. Officer Quinlan was called in and he followed Cooney into an alley way and arrested him, the knife being still in his possession. He was locked up to await the result of the injuries on Gallagher, who, it is believed, cannot recover.

MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS.

Board of Aldermen.

The usual weekly meeting of this Board was held yesterday, President Cochrane in the chair. The following business was transacted:—

STREET CLEANING CONTRACT.

Alderman WILDER moved the following resolution, which was adopted unanimously, with the exception of Alderman Coman, who voted in the negative, "That the Legislature is hereby respectfully requested to grant the bill of the Hon. Mr. Laughran (No. 902) in relation to the cleaning of the streets, &c., and the cancellation of the existing contracts in relation thereto."

The report of the Committee on Streets was read, which, after stating the grievance and detailing the terms of the contract, submitted the following resolution, which was adopted:—"That the street cleaning commission be earnestly requested to take immediate steps for the termination of the so-called 'street cleaning contract' and restore the contract over the matter to where the matter properly belongs, so that our citizens may enjoy the great blessing of clean streets at a limited expenditure of money."

After the transaction of routine business the Board adjourned till Monday next, at three o'clock.

Board of Assistant Aldermen.

The Board of Assistant Aldermen met at two o'clock to day, Otis T. Hall, President, in the chair, and the following members present at the roll-call:—Messrs. Foley, Stacom, Galvin, Robinson, Kraus, Coddington, Strack, Pinckney, Costello, Wade, Littlefield, Geis, Simonson, Cumisky, McDonald and Schwartz.

IS THIS A SINECURE?

During the reading of the minutes by the Deputy Clerk Assistant Alderman PINCKNEY rose to a question of privilege. He said there was a person receiving a salary as reader to the Board, and he wished to know why he did not make his appearance and do his duty. He is receiving a salary.

The PRESIDENT replied that the Clerk informed him that the reader was still sick and unable to be present.

Mr. PINCKNEY—It is doubtful whether he can read; he has never done anything to entitle him to compensation.

PREVENT AN EPIDEMIC.

Assistant Alderman STRACK presented from the Taxpayers' Association of the Tenth, Eleventh and Seventeenth wards, a petition calling attention to the filthy condition of the streets in the very densely populated district comprising these wards, and praying that the Board take decisive action looking to the immediate cleaning of the streets.

The petition was referred to the Committee on Public Health.

RAILWAY COMPANIES NOT LICENSE FEES.

Assistant Alderman GEIS presented a resolution calling upon the Bureau of Permits for an account of the amount of money paid for license fees by the several city railroads since their organization, as also all amounts of moneys paid by the several city stage and accommodation coaches and the names of all defaulting railway and stage companies, if any.

The resolution was adopted.

Mr. GEIS also offered a resolution directing the Corporation Counsel to report if there are any actions pending by the city against street railway companies, and if so, in what condition such actions are; also if any compromise has been offered as to the arrears of license fees by any railway company. Mr. Geis said that by an agreement entered into by the Third Avenue Railroad in 1853 it was agreed that they pay an annual license fee for each car. This agreement has not been complied with.

Assistant Alderman CONNOR said that the Railroad Committee has had the matter of license fees under consideration. They have found that other companies are defaulters as well as the Third Avenue.

The resolution was, however, laid on the table.

THE STREETS AGAIN—TALL TALK.

Assistant Alderman STRACK offered, as a supplement to the petition presented by him at an earlier stage of the proceedings, a resolution requesting the Street Cleaning Commission to direct the street cleaning contractor to sprinkle the streets while they are being swept and to have the gutters of all the streets washed when necessary.

Assistant Alderman PINCKNEY said, in speaking to the resolution, that one man named Brown is allowed the money of the city through the Street Cleaning Commission. If he had his deserts he would be in Sing Sing now. Through his neglect more sickness has been created and greater fear than by the smallpox. Why not indict the Street Cleaning Commission?—for they are parties to Brown's stealing. I don't believe in this child's talk; the Commission have been wasting time while the city is suffering. This Brown is dividing the money with thieves, and you know it. I think shooting is the only remedy we have for the abolishment of this useless Commission.

Several other members followed, condemning the tardy action of the Commission, but in more moderate language than Mr. Pinckney used.

The Board adjourned to Thursday.

Comptroller Green Again on "Excise Money."

Comptroller Green has forwarded the following additional communication to the Commissioners of Excise:—

MAY 2, 1872.

TO THE COMMISSIONERS OF THE BOARD OF EXCISE:—

GENTLEMEN—Your communication of the 30th April, with the City Chamberlain's receipt for $22,624 79 deposited, received, showing a balance of $11,894 39, "cash in bank," which should, by the express terms of section 48, chapter 385, Laws of 1870, be deposited with the Chamberlain of the city.

The amount of $26,276 74 is charged on disbursements made by your Board from September 1, 1871, to April 30, 1872, inclusive, unaccompanied by vouchers for the same, and being about ten per cent of the gross receipts for the year.

As your year closed with the date of your letter (April 30) you will see the propriety of furnishing vouchers for the above disbursements, for examination and verification, and of complying with the terms of the section of the law above referred to, by depositing with the Chamberlain this balance of $11,894 39. Very respectfully,

ANDREW H. GREEN, Comptroller.

THE FILTHY STREETS.

An Important Session of the Street Cleaning Commission—The Corporation Counsel's Opinion Asked as to the Contract—The Police Recommended as Street Cleaners by Judge Bosworth.

The Street Cleaning Commission met yesterday in the Comptroller's office at ten o'clock, the Mayor in the chair. The following members were present:—Recorder Hackett, Comptroller Green, Judge Bosworth, City Inspector, and Richard O'Gorman, Corporation Counsel.

The meeting was called to consider a subject broached by the Recorder at the last meeting of the Commission on Friday last—namely, the right of the Board to rescind the street cleaning contract, at present held by John L. Brown, if it should appear to the members of the Street Cleaning Commission that he had substantially violated the terms of the contract. The Mayor, at the last meeting, said that he was in favor of rescinding the contract, but as the right of the Commission was doubtful the meeting was adjourned until yesterday.

To set all doubts at rest the Comptroller offered the following resolution:—

Resolved, That the Comptroller be and is hereby authorized to submit to counsel the street cleaning contract and relative documents as to the cleaning of the streets, with such facts relating to the performance thereof and the work under the same as the Street Cleaning Commission is possessed of, and to obtain and lay before the Commission at the next meeting, at three o'clock on Thursday next, an opinion as to the rights and liability of the city under and in reference to the said contract and the performance of the said work, and that Messrs. Strahan and Porter be selected to make such a report.

This resolution was put and carried unanimously.

A long discussion ensued as to the right of the Commission to enter into a new contract should Messrs. Porter and Strahan report that it was within the power of the Commissioners to rescind the contract.

The RECORDER was inclined to think that the Commissioners had such power, and had power to rescind the contract as long as it was proved to their satisfaction that there was a substantial violation of it.

Mr. O'GORMAN here called for a copy of the contract, and, having read it over carefully, delivered the following opinion:—"I have never seen a contract so hampered with provisions. I believe that the contract was drawn up entirely in the interest of the contracting parties.

AGAINST THE INTERESTS OF THE CITY."

He then pointed out section 9 of the contract, which provides that the contractor be notified of his violation of the contract ten days before any action could be taken by the Commission. If was not made good within twenty-four hours the Commissioners had it only in their power to put the contract in the hands of the sureties of the contractor and hold their bonds as a guarantee for the proper performance of it. He said, in conclusion, that he believed that if the contract was carried out to the letter that the city of New York would not be half cleaned. The contract provided that the streets only be cleaned once a week.

Judge BOSWORTH called the attention of the Board to the fact that there was now a bill before the Legislature which would put the street cleaning into

THE HANDS OF THE POLICE

Department. He said that if this bill were passed, if any street was uncleaned it could at once be telegraphed to police headquarters and the abuse would be immediately corrected. He added that if the police had the contract the Board of Health would be spared expense and could work in with them. He said that neither Brown nor any other man could clean the streets as long as in the streets was allowed to remain in its present condition. The money which should be expended on a uniform pavement had been squandered or appropriated to other objects.

The Comptroller, the Mayor and the Corporation Counsel vehemently opposed the giving of the contract to the police, Mr. O'Gorman saying that it was the province of the policeman to detect and observe the abuse, and that a policeman with a club in one hand and a broom in the other would be a rather ridiculous object.

Judge BOSWORTH then offered the following general resolution, leaving out the police:—

Resolved, That the Street Cleaning Commission respectfully memorialize the Legislature at once to consider and immediately act upon the various subjects comprised in Assembly bill No. 902, and to provide, in such form of law as may seem best to the Legislature, the main object sought for by such bill, the present street cleaning contract and the details of street cleaning for New York in the future.

This resolution was carried unanimously.

Mayor HALL then submitted the following resolution, which was tabled:—

Resolved, That pending the settlement of embarrassing legal questions now before the Board for discussion and determination, involving large monetary interests to the city, that this Board request the Board of Health to immediately clean the streets of the city, a temporary act of necessary sanitary power, and that the Board of Apportionment and the Comptroller do immediately appropriate over to the Board of Health the sums necessary to carry out such work.

The MAYOR remarked that though the contract with Mr. Brown still existed, he was of opinion that the Commission could and ought to take the above step as a necessary sanitary measure.

Contractor BROWN asked that the bills which he had submitted to the Comptroller be paid, as he had no money to pay his men. Further consideration was postponed until the next meeting.

OUR CITY RAILROADS.

Commissioner Van Nort After the Railroad Companies With a Sharp Stick.

Commissioner Van Nort has addressed the following communication to the railroad companies:—

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS,
COMMISSIONER'S OFFICE, 237 BROADWAY,
NEW YORK, May 6, 1872.

GENTLEMEN—This Department is now making extensive repairs to the paving in the streets and avenues of the city, and in many instances the railroad tracks are found much below the grade and the paving in and about the tracks needing repairs.

In carrying out this much-needed improvement your co-operation is desired.

The conditions under which your railroad company holds its grant or charter rights call for keeping in order the paving in and about the tracks, and the privileges enjoyed by the companies from the city entitle it to expect in return a full compliance on the part of the companies with the terms under which such valuable franchises are held.

I therefore respectfully request and urge that your workmen proceed immediately to place your tracks on grade and repair the paving about the tracks, that this Department may not be delayed in accomplishing the work it has on hand. Respectfully,

J. M. VAN NORT, Commissioner of Public Works.

REDUCING THE EXPENSES.

Commissioner Van Nort has addressed the following communication to Comptroller Green:—

COMMISSIONER'S OFFICE, 237 Broadway.

TO THE DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK—

This Department, in acknowledging the receipt of the circular of the 13th ult. requesting a revision of the estimate made in response to that of the 6th of December, 1871, and showing such reductions as can be made in the expenditure of this Department for the remainder of the year 1872, from May 1 to December 31 of the current year, I respectfully transmit the enclosed estimate. Such reductions as economy and safety to the interests of the city would permit, in the judgment of the Department, have been made.

The amount of reduction over the estimate for the entire year, as in accordance with the previous estimate, is $235,573 83. This is in consequence of a more thorough and complete examination of the full workings of the Department, the reduction of its force and the economy of its workings. Respectfully,

GEORGE M. VAN NORT,
Commissioner of Public Works.

KINGS COUNTY MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS.

Meeting of the Board of Aldermen.

The Board of Aldermen met yesterday, Alderman Bergen presiding.

A petition to have an ordinance passed providing for the closing of the Hamilton avenue bridge for two hours in the morning and two hours in the evening, at which time the crossing is most frequent, was referred to a special committee.

The trustees of the Union Cemetery submitted a protest against the removal of remains from that portion of the Cemetery where Palmetto street is to be cut through. The protest was referred to the Corporation Counsel.

A communication was received from the Comptroller giving a statement of the condition of the general fund accounts. The expenditure of the city government up to May 1 was $1,747,378 03. The balance on hand was $1,909,469 22.

The Board then adjourned.

THE JERSEY OLIGARCHY.

Opening of the Hudson County Courts—The Ring Operators To Be Placed on Trial To-Day.

The Hudson county Courts will be opened to-day at Jersey City. The following gentlemen compose the Grand Jury:—John E. McWhorter, foreman; Noah D. Taylor, Isaac I. Vanderbeek, Tunis T. Onderdonk, James Harper, Æneas Fitzpatrick, Isaac N. Quimby, James Dowd, John M. Wilson, John Brinkerhoff, John Sanders, Richard J. Baile, Daniel McLeod, Frederick L. Schmersahl, James Kilduff, James Livesy, William Cox, John Combs, Richard Heelis, Daniel Delaney, Frederick H. Schwartz, Frederick W. Hermann, William H. Danielson, Joseph E. Taylor.

This is the best Grand Jury, as a body, that has been selected in Hudson county within the past twelve years. Sheriff Reinhardt has been particularly careful to select men whose reputation is above reproach, in view of the probability of a review of the proceeding of the courts by the Court of Appeals. A "struck jury" has been empanelled for to-day to try one of the cases against the commissions. The ensuing week will be occupied by the Grand Jury in the hearing of assault and battery cases, larceny cases and others of like character sent up by the county justices. Next Monday the Grand Jury will commence the investigation of cases against the several Boards of the Jersey City government.

HOBOKEN'S NEW GOVERNMENT.

The newly elected members of the Common Council organized last evening by unanimously electing Mr. Stbogart chairman.

The reading of Mayor Schmersal's message followed next in order. He congratulated the Council on the triumph of the people over one of the rings that has crushed Hoboken for years, in their endeavor to open their streets to the river. In spite of the fact that the Hoboken schools have so far failed to approximate the high standard of education existing in the New York schools, His Honor complimented the Hoboken school officials for having made some improvement. He reminded the Council that an act had recently passed authorizing the improvement of the public squares. This act was passed at the last session, and is considered by the people one of the most unfair that Hoboken has had yet to deal with. It provides for the improvement of the squares at the expense only of those living around them. The scheme, of course, will never be effected, inasmuch as it violates the first principles of justice. The public squares are public property, and the public will ultimately bear the expense of their improvement. He dealt a deadly blow against the former workings of the Ring against some of the contractors. These latter individuals were paid for their labors, with "improvement certificates," many of which were bought from the needy contractors at an extortionate discount by ring agents. It was the interest of the buyers of this scrip to delay as far as possible the redemption of them. The Mayor suggests the immediate issuance of bonds to pay the city's indebtedness. The enormous sum of $18,000 has been paid within the past year for city printing, and His Honor suggested a reform in this matter. No such reform will or can take place, for the very message itself was ordered to be printed in all the official papers, and that by a unanimous vote, although the message does not contain a single item of news for the people. The men known in Hoboken as "City Surveyors," who have made such large amounts of money out of the treasury within the past few years, were alluded to. His Honor requested that a standard of rates should be fixed, by which they might be guided in making such payments. Past experience showed the necessity of overhauling each official's accounts, and this should be done every three months.

The standing committees were then announced, when much consternation was manifested at the manner in which Councilmen Lee and Mansell, and one or two others, were shamefully ignored. On the whole, the present Council does not promise to be a whit better than the past. A ring is already formed. The fate of the Jersey City oligarchy seems to have no terrors for the self-sacrificing men of the new government.

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

Yesterday afternoon Justice Coulter, this week the presiding Magistrate on the bench of the Yorkville Police Court, received a curious letter, by post. The contents were that Carl Reinhardt, of 421 Pine street, and residing at 108 East Fifty-sixth street, wished His Honor to take notice that he had been robbed on Sunday evening of a gold watch and chain and $50 in cash, while passing through Fifty-seventh street, between Seventh and Eighth avenues, and that he wished His Honor to take immediate action in the matter with the view of recovering the money. The Court looked puzzled for a moment, as well it might, but, with its usual sagacity, it gave no expression to the opinion entertained of the writer of that note.

METHODIST GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Report of the Book Committee—Kilbreth's Investigations and Its Results—William M. Tweed's Library Furnished from the Book Concern.

Conference met yesterday, Bishop Ames presiding. After the devotional and preliminary exercises the reception of fraternal delegates was made the order of the day for Wednesday at ten A. M.

The Book Committee's quadrennial report was then presented and read by the secretary. It sets out with a statement that notwithstanding reverses the Concern has made substantial progress. It bears witness to the efficiency of the editors and agents, and declares that the changes made by them are all improvements needed to keep up with the progress of the age. New wants are, however, coming up, which the General Conference are called upon to supply. The fire in Chicago caused a loss to the publishing interests of $90,000, but no serious interruption to business resulted therefrom. But a greater calamity befell the Concern in New York, but the losses in this case cannot be estimated in dollars and cents. Reference is then made to the first publication of fraud and corruption in the daily press, which allegations were investigated by a sub-committee of the Book Committee, called together by Dr. Lanahan without the knowledge of Dr. Carlton. The report of the committee after this investigation has been generally condemned. The seriousness of these charges will be evident when it is considered that the New York Concern is the

of its kind. With its fall, therefore, all other interests of the Church must suffer also. Dr. Carlton's endeavor to make a public denial of those allegations and Dr. Lanahan's refusal are next noticed. The action of the committee was construed by Dr. Lanahan as a conspiracy against himself, and the committee for asking for specific charges were accused of being engaged in this conspiracy. To doubt his conclusions he considered was to doubt his veracity, and this feature of the case greatly embarrassed the committee in its investigation, which had been intended to have been as thorough and impartial as could be made. These investigations have not changed the judgment of the committee in any material particular.

The several measures of compromise, investigations, reports, renewed charges, &c., are next recited, and the futile efforts to quiet them are painfully apparent. At the investigation in January, 1870, fifty witnesses were examined. The attendance of witnesses and their testimony were voluntary, and yet only one refused to answer. Efforts had been made by the committee to procure evidence from the editor of the Methodist and the editor of the New York Times, which from their editorials and reports it was presumed they were possessed of, but they failed. Three questions were raised in the several investigations, around which all the testimony might be grouped, namely:—Have there been fraud and corruption in the management of the Book Concern? Has there been any such fraud and corruption as charged in the management of the printing department? And a similar question in regard to the bindery department. The committee were compelled, after their investigations, to answer those questions in the negative. When they came to consider they found that such losses as charged could not have existed without fraud and collusion being proved also. Hence a negative answer was given to this charge also. Nevertheless, the needless and wicked agitation of this matter has been kept before the Church.

An inquiry into the personal relations of the agents was dropped, and it was hoped that quiet would prevail until the meeting of the General Conference. But an inflammatory fly-sheet was sent out broadcast, and the secular and religious papers of Baltimore were most fierce, hostile and unscrupulous in their demonstrations in regard to it, so that fears were entertained for the safety of the Concern. Hence originated the trial of Dr. Lanahan, with which the public are familiar. Referring to the late investigation by Mr. J. P. Kilbreth, of Cincinnati, whose report was called for and read in connection with the Book Committee's report, the committee say that the Church owes Mr. Kilbreth a debt of gratitude, since now, after his thorough and careful investigation, he absolutely refuses compensation. The Conference heartily applauded this generous act. Mr. Kilbreth sets forth the mode of making himself familiar with the business and routine of the Concern. He sat beside agents, cashier and bookkeeper, saw the letters opened, read them, saw them filed by the different departments and followed them to their final and legitimate conclusion. When he had thus made himself familiar with the workings of the Concern he called upon Dr. Lanahan for specific charges of mismanagement and fraud, which he would specially investigate. This Dr. Lanahan refused to do unless he was allowed to appoint an assistant. Mr. Kilbreth could not consent to have any one's favorite appointed assistant as a condition precedent, but he agreed to do this as a courtesy whenever he should need an assistant. His report and the documents examined, Mr. Kilbreth declares, would make a book as large as the Holy Bible. He denied that the business of the Concern is in a confused state, as alleged, but is in an understandable shape, and it is easy to ascertain the business of the house from the books. From ten to thirty years back in the keeping of books, but no frauds can be found. But within the last five years there occur no more errors than can be found in any extensive business house. The financial management of the Concern he considered above reproach. Prima facie evidence of irregularity appears in the books and reports of 1867, which upon investigation proved not to be errors at all, and might have been explained in a few minutes by the bookkeeper. Every serious specification goes back from five to ten years. The reports of Mr. Gongé and Mr. Appel, Dr. Lanahan's special accountants, are analyzed by Mr. Kilbreth and shown to be erroneous. For instance, they state that, according to the exhibit to the Annual Conferences for the year ending November 30, 1868, the profits of the Concern were $56,244 74, whereas the ledger shows them to be but $53,446 46. They, therefore, claim a fraud discovered, but Mr. Kilbreth shows that this apparent discrepancy is accounted for in the discounts. The difference between $82,279 82 discounted from the debts due the Concern in the exhibit of 1867, and $79,481 54 in 1868, accounts exactly for the difference between $56,244 74 and $53,446 46.

THERE ARE INACCURACIES AND CONFUSION

HOW EXPERTS DISAGREE.

Again, those experts say that the inventory of merchandise on hand for 1868 on the inventory book is $161,493 99, and by a deduction of fifteen per cent it is reduced to $130,758 04, and on the ledger it is entered $140,895 52, and hence another fraudulent entry is made out. Mr. Kilbreth, however, thinks this the most unaccountable blunder into which Mr. Gongé could fall, since the merchandise inventory of 1868 contains six items which foot up $140,895 52, and this footing is plainly made on the inventory and in the ledger. Other and similar absurdities of Gongé and Appel are presented so clearly by Mr. Kilbreth that they can have no force whatever as against his findings and conclusions.

An analysis of the balancing entries from December 31, 1860, to November 30, 1866, shows an aggregate loss for the six years of $27,609 65, leaving out of view the sum of $116,841 90, paid out during that period by order of the General Conference for bishops' salaries and other disbursements. Counting these, the aggregate profit in said six years would appear to have been $89,232 22. This small show of profits results from over reduction of values.

During the above interval there was taken off the valuation of real estate $38,903 53, and off the valuation of stock the sum of $123,756 24.

Mr. Kilbreth, in discussing the question of purchases of paper, shows conclusively that Campbell, Hall & Co. were the first to seek the services of J. F. Porter to sell their paper to the Concern, and that they, and not the Book Concern, paid Porter's commissions, and this accounts for their subsequent anxiety to have him displaced when his commissions became too large. It, nevertheless, appears from their own testimony before the committee that while they were selling the same kind of paper in like quantities to Harpers for 16 4-5 cents a pound they were charging the Methodist Book Concern, through its agent, Dr. Lanahan, 17¼ cents. Mr. Kilbreth very pertinently remarks upon this that if he were agent of the Book Concern, and had to pay more for paper than the Harpers, he certainly should not pay it to the same manufacturers. The Concern bought its paper exclusively from this firm and from that of S. D. Warren & Co., of Boston, and from the latter company Mr. Kilbreth ascertained that while that firm, dealing through J. F. Porter, charged the Concern an average of 17.11 cents per pound for book paper and 15.55 cents a pound for newspaper, it charged other purchasers for the same goods 17.40 and 15.73 cents a pound respectively. In regard to department against H. R. Hoffman, which were grouped in the form of thirteen questions, Mr. Kilbreth finds No. 2, relating to 141 dozen sheep skins alleged to have been paid for in 1869, but afterwards sent away without being used, not proven. The testimony is contradictory and is in support of Hoffman's explanation, that they were exchanged for other stock. No. 3 refers to excessive quantities of glue bought, but by a comparison Mr. Kilbreth shows that Mr. Andrus, the present Superintendent, uses just as much glue as Hoffman used. Nos. 4 and 5 refer to four yards of black velvet, at $17 a yard, and six pieces of muslin, and Mr. Kilbreth finds the testimony in Hoffman's favor. No. 9 relates to the gold sweepings ($1,600 a year), which went into Hoffman's salary, $500 of which went, however, to the stamper and finisher. No. 12 refers to a lot of forty dozen morocco, alleged to have been paid for by the Concern, but afterwards offered for sale in the tin shop of Mr. Nelson, in Pearl street. The chief witness against Hoffman in this case is Mr. Lutkins, who confesses to have tried to get Hoffman into a partnership to defraud the Concern, and, having failed in his foul purpose, made malicious charges against him. No. 13, relating to commissions on purchases, is sustained only by Lutkins' testimony, while a score of merchants with whom the Concern dealt, and still deals, positively affirm that they never gave Hoffman one cent in this way. Nos. 6 and 7 relate to alleged frauds in the salaries account in the bindery department, which, according to Dr. Lanahan's allegations, amounted, in a period of less than four months, from December 16, 1868, to April 1, 1869, to $448 45, Mr. Kilbreth thinks looks suspicious; but the business was managed so carelessly that he would not be ready to say that fraud was actually accomplished in this particular. No. 1, which is the most serious charge against Hoffman, relates to an alleged deficit of 1,400 dozen skins between December, 1867, and September, 1869. Mr. Kilbreth, after careful examination, declares that there is shown either or probably both, during Mr. Hoffman's superintendency. But the loss of the Concern falls very far short of what has been repeatedly alleged, and the losses do not much exceed the expenses already incurred in investigating them; nor do they justify the extravagant statements of a large part of the press.

THE CHARGES OF FRAUD IN THE BINDERY

GREAT WASTE OR DISHONESTY IN THE BINDERY,

At the conclusion of the report a motion was promptly made to adjourn and was carried, whereby the minority of the committee were cut off from presenting their report. This, however, contains nothing new beside the allegations of fraud already so abundantly made and disproved, save a statement that Hoffman was allowed and justified by his superior in office (Dr. Carlton) in making presents of costly and elegant books belonging to the Concern to William M. Tweed and other personal friends. A free fight is expected over this matter to-day.

AMERICAN SEAMEN'S FRIEND SOCIETY.

Forty-fourth Anniversary Meeting—Abstract of the Last Annual Report—Addresses, &c.

The forty-fourth anniversary of the American Seamen's Friend Society was held last evening in the Dutch Reformed church, Twenty-ninth street and Fifth avenue. The chair was taken by W. A. Booth, President of the society. The proceedings were opened with the reading of the Scriptures, singing and prayer, after which the annual report was read by the Secretary. The following is an abstract:—

The year 1871 has been one of the most successful that the society has yet experienced, notwithstanding the heavy drain upon the resources of the charitably disposed community, occasioned by the Chicago fire, and other kindred calamities, the subscriptions to the Seaman's fund here being in excess of any previous year. The building of the Seamen's Exchange, at a cost of $190,000 has been a heavy drain upon the society's resources, but the work has been happily and successfully accomplished.

It has also supported (wholly or in part) from its treasury over forty chaplains and missionaries, laboring in the chief seaports of this and foreign countries. These devoted men have been greatly blessed in their manifold labors, preaching the Gospel in bethels and on shipboard, visiting seamen in the forecastle and in hospitals, circulating the Scriptures, &c. An unusually large number of hopeful conversions is given—more than two hundred—in the reports which have been furnished us.

Upon advice given us, after a tour of inspection by one of our chaplains commissioned for the purpose, our missions in Northern Europe have been readjusted so as to promise greater efficiency. A new interest has also been created by the earnestness and success of the recently appointed chaplain in Genoa, a station of growing importance.

The chaplains and missionaries of the society on the home field have been laboring in Portland, Boston, New York and Brooklyn, Norfolk, Wilmington, N. C.; Charleston, Savannah, Pensacola, Mobile, New Orleans, Galveston, San Francisco, Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse and along the inland waters of the State of New York. Much good has been done at all these stations, and encouragement is felt in regard to many persons who had gone out from them religiously impressed.

The Sailors' Home, 190 Cherry street, continues to be appreciated by seafaring men, who publish its excellence everywhere they go. The past year has been the most prosperous in its history. The number of boarders has been 2,200, an increase of 238 over the previous year, and of 1,237 over the year before. These deposited with the Superintendent for safe keeping $32,741, of which sum $16,144 were sent to relatives, and $3,843 were placed in savings banks.

LIBRARY WORK.

The number of libraries sent to sea during the year ending May 1, 1872, is 736 (312 new and 424 refitted), on vessels carrying 10,388 men, making the total number sent out since the work was inaugurated, fourteen years ago, 4,025, containing at least 135,000 volumes, and accessible in their frequent reshipments to 177,519 men. The total number of libraries shipped in the navy is 799, accessible at different times to 99,580 men.

The total expenditures for the year ending May 1, 1872 (with balance from previous account), were $63,017 10. The receipts from all sources were $60,126 35.

COLORED SAILORS' HOME.

At this institution, in whose aid the society has made, as heretofore, a liberal appropriation, there have been 610 boarders, among them several shipwrecked and destitute, who have been relieved at an expense to our treasury of $318. The whole number of boarders since this Home was opened in 1869 is 17,486.

It is an interesting fact, that will bear to be frequently stated, that the Home, during the thirty years of its existence, has saved to seamen and their families over a million and a half of dollars—nearly double the amount received into the society's treasury for the support of all its operations.

Not the least of its many excellent features is the Saturday evening prayer meeting at the Home. This meeting is sometimes crowded and full of spirit and very profitable. Besides the Superintendent one of the society's missionaries is always in attendance, as he is always accessible to the boarders, and here, in their spiritual birthplace, prayer has been answered in the conversion of many souls.

The opening of the Seamen's Exchange, with its savings bank and shipping offices and attractive public hall for lectures, addresses, &c., immediately opposite the Home, will give it additional prominence, and doubtless do much also to extend its benefits.

At the conclusion of the reading of the report Judge Benedict addressed the audience in an eloquent speech, and was followed by Rev. H. M. Scudder, of Brooklyn, and Rev. William M. Taylor, pastor of the Broadway Tabernacle. The proceedings were terminated by the singing of the following hymn:—

Isles of the deep! your redemption is nearing;
Lift with the waves the glad song of the free!
He that was promised in triumph appearing,
Now wields his sway o'er the land and the sea.

Loud from the top of the mountains sing praises;
Valleys shall ring with the echoing strains;
Mighty in war, he the standard upraises,
Glorious in peace, he advances to reign.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

The Report of the Committee in Relation to the Coinage of the United States.

A special meeting of the Chamber of Commerce was held yesterday afternoon to receive the report from Committee No. 3 on the bill pending in Congress relative to the Mint, assay offices and coinage of the United States.

Mr. William E. Dodge presided and called the attention of the Chamber to the object of the meeting.

Mr. Samuel B. Ruggles, Chairman of the Committee on Coinage, &c., offered the following resolutions:—

Resolved, That, in view of the bill now pending in Congress for revising the laws relative to the coinage of the United States, the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York respectfully requests the Senators and Representatives from said State to urge upon Congress the propriety and importance of exempting the coinage of gold and silver from all charges beyond the actual cost of refining and coining and a small percentage sufficient to provide a fund for withdrawing from circulation and recoining the gold and silver coins of the United States whenever worn by use below "the standard and limit of tolerance" prescribed or to be prescribed by law.

Resolved, That the Chamber perceives, with great satisfaction, that the pending bill provides that the gold dollar shall be "the unit of value," and that the silver dollar shall hereafter be a legal tender only for amounts not exceeding $5, thereby putting an end in the United States to the absurdity of a "double standard" for legal money, and establishing gold as the single and only standard. The bill further proposes to reduce the weight of the silver dollar (now 412½ grains, at which it has virtually ceased to circulate) to 384 grains, being double the present weight of the half dollar and other subdivisions of the dollar. In view, however, of the important fact that, by an addition to the proposed weight of 384 grains of only one grain and four fifths of a grain (being in money value less than half a cent), the weight of the new dollar may be established at 385 80-100 grains practically, the exact equiponderant of twenty-five even metric grammes, that increase is strongly recommended. This is the actual legal weight in silver, nine-tenths fine, of the five franc silver coin of France, Belgium and Switzerland, of the five lire silver coin of Italy, of the five drachma silver coin of Greece, of the five peseta silver coin of Spain, and precisely equivalent to two florins of the new coinage proposed for Austria and about to be established. The new dollar of the United States, having a population of 40,000,000, with this metric weight, would circulate side by side with the silver coinages of all those nations having a population exceeding 125,000,000. The widespread unification of silver thus obtained without loss or inconvenience to the United States, and with a change so trifling from the existing subdivisions of its silver coin, would in its turn inevitably lead to the more important unification of the present varying gold coinages of the world. It is in view of these facts that the Chamber ventures to express the hope by the present resolution that the Congress and the executive authorities of the United States will not hesitate to adopt this weight of twenty-five metric grammes, or 385 80-100 grains, for the new silver dollar, leading to results so important to the civilization of the age.

The foregoing resolutions were unanimously adopted by the Chamber and ordered to be transmitted to both houses of Congress.

On motion, the Chamber then adjourned.

Edward Hart, a butcher boy fourteen years of age, was locked up by Justice Cox, at Jefferson Market, yesterday afternoon, upon complaint of Andrew J. Case, of 237 Grand street, who charges he picked his pocket of a small sum of money while standing at the corner of Broadway and Prince street yesterday. He denied the charge.
